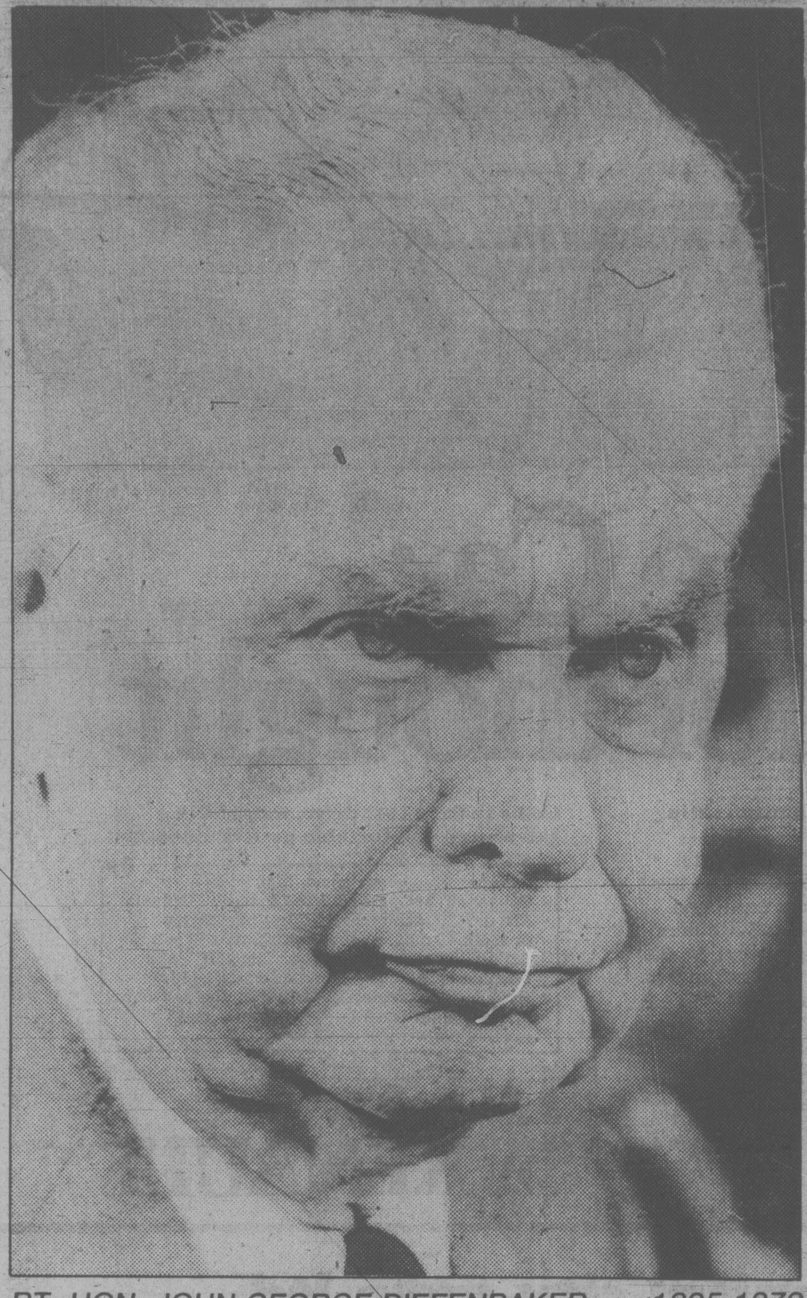
Dief dead at 83



RT. HON. JOHN GEORGE DIEFENBAKER . . . 1895-1979

OTTAWA (CP) — John Diefenbaker, 83, the former prime minister who became a living legend, died today and will be given the traditional honors of a state funeral.

He was found dead in the study of his Rockcliffe Park home about two hours after getting up as usual about 5 a.m. Ottawa time. He died with some parliamentary papers still in his hands, apparently of a sudden heart attack, his secretary said.

"I think it was the way he would have wanted to go," said Keith Martin, his executive assistant for the last 10 years.

After establishing a national reputation as a civil rights advocate and courtroom defence attorney, Diefenbaker was elected prime minister in 1957, swept the country in 1958 preaching a vision of Northern development and suffered defeat in 1963 with dissension in his cabinet.

Though defeated, he never retired.

Funeral plans are incomplete, but the body will lie in state Friday in the Centre Block on Parliament Hill. The House of Commons was Diefenbaker's political and spiritual home for nearly 40 years.

Martin said a state funeral service is likely to be held here after the body has lain in state for a couple of days. It may then be taken to Prince Albert, Sask., by train.

The funeral train would be appropriate, over the route the old political warrior travelled as a young man in an upper berth, or as prime minister in a private car. He loved to watch the wide sweep of the prairies roll by his train windows.

Diefenbaker was active to the end of a political career that began in Saskatchewan in the 1920s, unsuccessfully at first. He was first elected to the Commons in 1940, and was successful at every general election that followed, including this spring's.

Martin said he died still clutching some papers relating to this fall's parliamentary session, the first that would see his Conservative party back in power with Joe Clark as its leader and prime minister. Clark was at one time a Diefenbaker aide.

Diefenbaker's den in his modest Rockcliffe home is crammed with mementos of Sir John A. Macdonald, the first prime minister.

He had lunch Wednesday at the National Press Club, and on Saturday appeared in an interview on the CTV network program Question Period, expressing concern about national unity.

"I'm greatly concerned about my country," he said. "I have never seen it as divided as today."

Diefenbaker, who was twice married, had no children. A brother, Elmer, predeceased him.

Diefenbaker's proudest legislative achievement was unquestionably the Bill of Rights, passed in 1960. He wrote it in terms which would apply to all parliamentary enactments, past and future, though it was — and is — itself an act that can be amended.

In retirement, he described the Bill of Rights as "a shield to protect and a spear to defend" fundamental freedoms in Canada.

He also introduced simultaneous translation of debates in French and English in Parliament, and made bank cheques legal in either language.

Diefenbaker was found dead by Archie McQueen of Hamilton, Ont., who had worked with the former prime minister on a volunteer basis during the summer months for some years.

He was proud of his prairie pioneer upbringing and his home constituency of Lake Centre and later Prince Albert in Saskatchewan. But Diefenbaker was born Sept. 18, 1895, at Neustadt, Ont. His father was a civil servant who moved West when John George Diefenbaker was eight.

The former prime minister died one month and two days short of his 84th birthday.

He had several illnesses in recent years, including pneumonia this summer which he said later had been critical and brought him near death.

A week before his death, he was still talking about making trips to China and to the North Pole. In his time he was the country's most-travelled prime minister, making a round-the-world tour of Commonwealth countries in 1958.

His first wife, Edna, whom he married in 1929, died in 1951 of leukemia.

His second wife, Olive, was a widow and friend of his youth, whom he married in 1953. A warm-hearted woman of almost queenly bearing who campaigned with Diefenbaker in a cloth coat because furs would look ostentatious, she died Dec. 22, 1976.

Queen mourns

Times News Services

LONDON — Queen Elizabeth said today she is greatly saddened to hear of the death of former Canadian prime minister John Diefenbaker.

"Canada has lost a man of great stature," the Queen said in a tribute issued from Buckingham Palace.

As the Queen and Canadian leaders reacted to the passing of Diefenbaker, flags here at the parliament buildings and city hall were lowered to half mast today in his memory.

In Quebec, however, flags on government buildings were to remain at full mast, the provincial government announced.

"The policy of the government of Quebec on lowering flags to half-mast dictates that we follow international custom and lower our flags only upon the death of an actual head of state or government," a protocol officer said.

Meanwhile, in Ottawa, the former prime minister was described as "a great human force who changed the history of our country and became a symbol of the resilient strength of the Canadian individual," by Prime Minister Joe Clark.

And Opposition Leader Pierre Trudeau paid tribute saying Diefenbaker was a man with "a very vigorous sense of human rights and individual liberties."

Trudeau said Diefenbaker had a tremendous personal following because of his ability to communicate with people and create bonds.

Gov.-Gen. Edward Schreyer responded to news of Diefenbaker's death by saying that all Canadians will feel a sense of loss.

Octuplets born to Italian woman

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — A 29-year-old Naples woman on fertility treatment gave birth prematurely today to octuplets, five girls and three boys. One girl died hours later and a doctor said the seven other babies were seriously underweight.

Doctors at Naples' Hospital of the Incurable said the babies' weights ranged from 14 ounces to 2.3 pounds. A doctor said he had "some hope" the two largest of the infants would survive.

The mother was identified as Mrs. Pasqualina Chianese. She was reported to have delivered six children three years ago, all of whom died a few hours after birth. She was said to be physically well, but afraid of losing all the infants. Mrs. Chianese and her husband, Stefano, an insurance company employee, live in a Naples suburb.

The previous highest number of surviving children in a multiple birth was six — which the Guinness Book of World Records says occurred twice, in Sydney, Australia, in 1971 and in Cape Town, South Africa, in 1974. Guinness officials in London said they based their multiple birth records on infants that survived their first birthdays.

Promises cost church $2M

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — In a case lawyers say may be a landmark — and a warning to religious institutions — a jury awarded a Portland woman more than $2 million because, for her, the promises of a better life through Scientology didn't come true.

Julie Titchbourne, 21, said church courses she took in 1975 did not live up to claims they would help her with her college classwork, develop her creativity and raise her IQ test scores.

Her lawyer said the decision Wednesday is a warning for new religions or cults.

"At least in Oregon, we've served notice on all people that if your're going to deal with our young people, you'd better do it fairly and honestly," said lawyer Garry McMurry.

A spokesman for the Scientologists said she is unsure what effect the verdict will have on the church.

Young quits UN post

By PHIL GAILEY
Washington Star

WASHINGTON — Andrew Young has resigned as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, saying he would rather leave his post than change his controversial style of diplomacy.

The 47-year-old diplomat handed his resignation to President Carter Wednesday afternoon at the White House one day after he was reprimanded for breaching U.S. policy by meeting secretly with a representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization and then giving the State Department a false account of what had happened.

The unrepentant Young hinted today he might meet again with the PLO's UN observer, Zehdi Labib Terzi, before leaving the UN post.

Young also said he would not be surprised if he had been spied on by Israeli agents.

He was asked specifically whether, as president of the UN Security Council for the month of August, he would meet again with Terzi if the Palestinian asked.

"It would be unconscionable to refuse to see somebody as president of the Security Council," he replied.

Pressed later for a clarification, he said he would meet with anyone wanting to see him as long as that person were qualified. Terzi might be considered qualified because the Council regularly grants him the right to address it during debates on the Palestinian issue.

It became clear today that unless he is immediately replaced, and President Carter has said he will act with due care and deliberation in naming a replacement, Young may still be the chief U.S. delegate to the UN, and therefore Council president, next Thursday, when the Council is scheduled to resume its debate over the Palestinians and resolutions to support their drive for statehood.

Young's meeting with the PLO representative touched off protests by Israeli leaders who accused the United States of changing its policy toward the PLO. Adding to Israeli jitters about U.S. policy was the State Department's acknowledgment Wednesday that Milton A. Wolf, the U.S. ambassador to Austria, had had three unauthorized meetings recently with a PLO official.

The PLO official reportedly contacted Wolf most recently in an effort to clarify that organization's position on an issue that the State Department would not reveal. The department said

Scotia mortgage rates increased

TORONTO (CP) — Less than a month after banks and trust companies raised mortgage rates, the Bank of Nova Scotia announced Wednesday further rate increases of one-quarter and one-half percentage points.

Other mortgage lenders, however, did not rush to follow Nova Scotia's lead.

Spokesmen for the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, the Royal Bank, the Bank of Montreal and the Toronto Dominion Bank said rates are under review.

The Bank of Nova Scotia's new rate on five-year closed conventional mortgages is 12 per cent. Closed mortgages levy penalties for payment before the mortgage term is up.

The rate at most other institutions is 11¾ per cent.

The other new rates are 12 per cent for three-year closed conventional mortgages, 12½ per cent for three-year open conventional mortgages and 11¾ per cent for five-year closed mortgages insured under the National Housing Act.

J. M. Brooks, president of Kinross Mortgage Corp., said the company is not about to raise mortgage rates again. Kinross is the mortgage affiliate of the Commerce bank.

And William Thornhill, assistant vice-president of Canada Trustco Mortgage Co., said the company does not plan to increase rates again until there is another increase in the Bank of Canada's rate.

Last month's increases in interest and mortgage rates came after the Bank of Canada raised its lending rate, a signal for other financial institutions to raise their rates to help support a lagging Canadian dollar.

The current Canadian prime loan rate is 12.5 per cent.

But some currency traders said increases in loan rates by U.S. banks may force Canadian interest and mortgage rates up.

Killer typhoon wreaks havoc

SHANGHAI, China (UPI) — Typhoon Irving, which has already ravaged the Philippines "rice bowl" area with its 160 km/h winds, headed today for the world's largest metropolis, Shanghai.

Chinese authorities issued an urgent warning to Shanghai and the surrounding area and residents braced themselves as wind-driven rain buffeted the area.

A radio broadcast warned residents in Shanghai, Jiangsu and Zhejiang provinces to be prepared for torrential rains.

Shanghai city has a population of 12 million and its entire metropolitan area numbers some 30 million.

Irving sent flood water rampaging through the Philipines "rice bowl" region today killing at least six people and forcing 67,500 persons to flee to higher ground, the Red Cross said.

Low-lying areas in 26 towns in the rice-producing central Luzon plain just north of Manila were flooded.

Weathermen said Irving, on an erratic course in the Pacific Ocean, sucked in a rain-laden monsoon.

The rains triggered landslides on the hairpin curves snaking up to Baguio city, isolating the mountain resort north of Manila.

Floods raced through the lowlands, breaking dikes and inflicting heavy damage to agricultural crops.

Last yacht reported safe

Times News Services

PLYMOUTH, England — With a new storm menacing and the death toll risen to 17, the last of the missing yachts from the Fastnet Race has been spotted and all hands reported safe.

Two men were still missing and feared drowned as high winds gusting to gale force were forecast today for the area off southwest coast of England where a freak summer storm Tuesday created havoc for more than 300 racing yachts making their way here from Ireland's Fastnet Rock in Admiral's Cup competition.

Rescue officials said today the lighthouse keeper of the Fastnet Rock reported all eight crew aboard the 38-foot British Kalisana were safe. The Royal Navy was checking the report.

More than 130 other sailors were plucked to safety from life rafts and dismasted craft in the nation's biggest air-sea rescue operation since the Second World War, spanning 52,000 square kilometres of ocean.

The final official total had 21 yachts sunk or abandoned — an estimated loss of more than $6 million.

Lloyd's of London refused to say what the insurance on the lost and damaged boats would total, but one broker said the bill come in at $9 million.

"No one who has been through an experience of that kind would wish to go through it again," said former British prime minister Edward Heath, who arrived back safely Wednesday evening aboard his yacht Morning Cloud IV.

Meanwhile, some yachtsmen, including American Ted Turner the dapper Atlanta millionaire who won the Fastnet portion of the Admiral's Cup competition aboard the sloop Tenacious, blamed lax safety standards for yachting's worst disaster.

Turner, 40, said many fellow yachtsmen have sacrificed stability for speed with lighter boats that could not ride out such a storm. A race organizer disagreed, but acknowledged officials were studying safety rules.

Ferry captain not 'green'

The organisation which represents B.C. Ferries captains is upset by some news reports which described the captain of the Queen of Alberni as a "greenhorn".

The ferry ran aground last week in Active Pass.

The Canadian Merchant Service Guild today identified the skipper as Capt. Albert Bahry.

Bahry was in command of the ferry when it ran aground on Collinson Reef.

Arnie Davis, secretary-treasurer of the CMSG, said Capt. Bahry is a highly qualified skipper.

"Bahry has been a well-known master in the B.C. Ferry fleet for years," Davis said today.

Davis said it may be true that Bahry was new to the Alberni but some news reports have suggested he was entirely inexperienced.

He said on the day of the accident, the CMSG retained Vancouver lawyer Tim Cameron to represent Bahry.

Mrs. Bahry, reached at their home in Tsawwassen, said today her husband has been a master with B.C. Ferries for 10 years.

Up until today, B.C. Ferries has not officially confirmed that Bahry was in command at the time of the crash.

Meanwhile, Highways Minister Alex Fraser, who said Wednesday there was hope the ferry might limp back into service within two weeks on reduced engine power, today ruled out that possibility.

He said the ferry might now be out of service twice as long as expected.

The minister said damage to engines might be more extensive than originally feared and it could be two months instead of one month before the vessel is back in service.

Imperial Oil strike over, Gulf's drivers voting

VANCOUVER (CP) — Teamster union pickets were lifted from Imperial Oil operations today after the striking tanker drivers voted Wednesday night to accept a $1.87-an-hour wage increase over two years.

Bill Lewis, a spokesman for Teamsters Local 213, said the 55 drivers employed by Imperial Oil voted 85 per cent in favor of the contract.

Lewis said the truckers will be asked to report to work by Friday, ending a strike that began Aug. 2.

The new contract gives the drivers a total wage increase of 95 cents an hour in the first year and 92 cents an hour in the second year. A driver's wage will rise to $10.59 an hour by Jan. 1, 1980, the beginning of the second year of the pact.

Meanwhile, 110 drivers employed by Gulf Oil Canada are voting on a similar contract offer. Both agreements were worked out with the aid of provincial labor ministry officials.

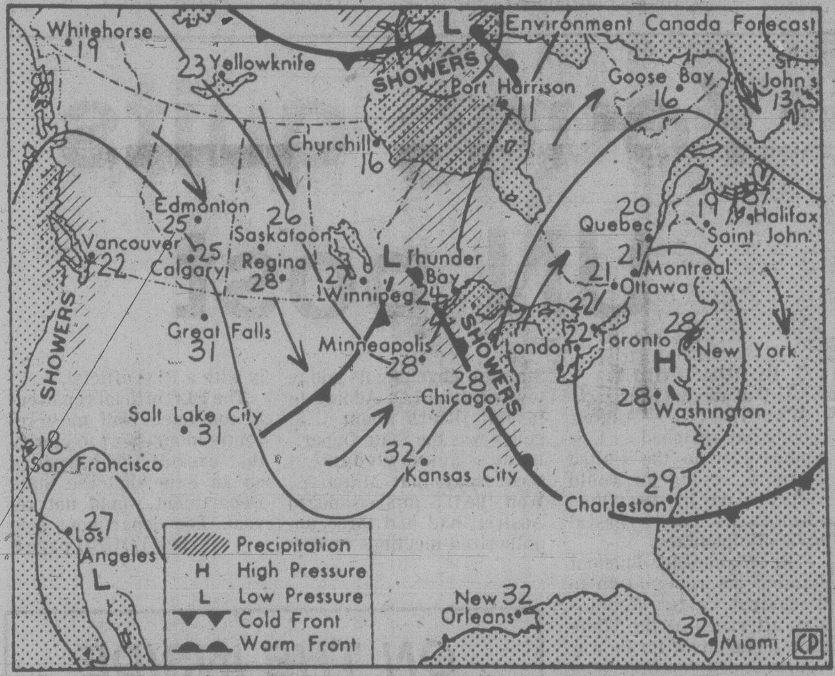
Chevron Canada and its 25 striking Teamster drivers have not yet reached a tentative settlement.

Ferry furore

COPENHAGEN (Reuters) — The three-party coalition government of the Faroe Islands, southeast of Iceland, has collapsed, the Faroe office in Copenhagen announced.

Officials said the government fell because Conservatives objected to plans by Dam's Social Democrats for the state to buy a new ferry boat.

The Weather



Map valid until noon Friday

Bands of cloud will continue to drift northward over southern B.C. today resulting in a few showers or thundershowers, especially to the interior. However, conditions are generally drier and a little more sunshine is expected in most areas today. This trend of gradual drying is expected to continue into the weekend for most of B.C. but north coastal areas will continue to have extensive low cloud.

Writer says Nixons tried to pair Tricia, left, with Charles

Royal in-law plan?

Prince Charles' 1970 visit to the White House turned out to be a royal pain. So says Anthony Holden in his upcoming biography Charles Prince of Wales. The prince suspected Richard Nixon of trying to fix him up with daughter Tricia. In an excerpt published in September's Ladies Home Journal, Holden says Nixon told the prince: "My wife and I will keep out of the way so that you can really feel at home." Then, the book says, Charles found himself seated next to Tricia at all meals, and scheduled to spend each day with her. The author suggests that accounted for the prince's "uncharacteristic cruelty" when he described Tricia as "artificial and plastic" during a later visit to America after Nixon quit the presidency.

In California Charles Vance, the son-in-law of former president Gerald Ford, has left the U.S. Secret Service after 14 years to set up his own protection agency with two other former agents. Vance, who married Susan Ford last February, said his company would offer celebrities, corporate officers and others who may be worried about their safety "the same type of VIP security" the Secret Service provides.

Their numbers have diminished, but the fervor of the fans visiting Elvis Presley's Graceland mansion in Memphis, Tenn., on the second anniversary of his death is as strong as ever. About 3,700 zealots came Wednesday to visit the gravesites of Elvis, who died two years ago today, and his parents, Vernon and Gladys.

Muhammad Ali's next fight might be in the political arena. An ad hoc committee is trying to talk the former champ into running for the U.S. Senate. Ali has some big hitters in his corner — the committee includes home-run king Hank Aaron.

Erik Estrada, co-star of the CHiPs TV series, was released Wednesday from the Los Angeles hospital where he was treated for injuries received in a motorcycle crash last week.

Proudly sporting a potbelly, Tiny Tim made his first appearance on the Tonight Show in almost five years Wednesday night. He just came back from a tour of Australia with Joe Frazier and Dennis Day. Interesting combination . . .

Guerrillas refuse truce during talks

LUSAKA, Zambia (AP) — Joshua Nkomo's guerrillas will not observe a ceasefire for negotiations under Britain's new peace initiative for Zimbabwe-Rhodesia, a spokesman said today.

Joshia Chinamano, vice-president of Nkomo's Zimbabwe African People's Union based in Lusaka, said "any suggestion that we observe a ceasefire in order for the (London) talks to succeed is a non-starter."

"We will continue being vigilant and we shall never be deceived by any apparent change in policy by Britain."

He said the Patriotic Front, the guerrilla alliance jointly led by Nkomo and the Mozambique-based forces of Robert Mugabe, cannot accept a truce until it sees that what it has been fighting for "is in sight."

The Zimbabwe-Rhodesia talks are scheduled tostart Sept. 10 in London.

On Wednesday, Mugabe said in Luanda, Angola, that the Patriotic Front will only agree to Britain's initiative if the guerrilla forces "constitute the people's army in any independent Zimbabwe."

$30M compensation offer covers half DC-10 victims

CHICAGO (Reuter) — In a first step to settle a barrage of lawsuits, the DC-10 aircraft builder McDonnell Douglas and American Airlines have offered $30 million compensation for almost half the 273 victims of the worst U.S. air crash.

Lawyers for McDonnell Douglas and the airline said Wednesday they made the offer to 112 families and six have accepted so far.

They said more offers will follow to families of other victims who died when an American Airlines DC-10 lost an engine and crashed while taking off from Chicago's O'Hare airport last May 25.

The lawyers announced the initial compensation offers when they appeared in federal court to answer 84 suits resulting from the crash. The suits seek damages running to more than $1.2 billion.

The lawyers said McDonnell Douglas and American Airlines in essence accepted liability and jointly agreed to pay compensation, but they will not agree to pay punitive damages.

They said they will try to settle the amounts of compensation out of court but are prepared to go to trial and let a jury decide if necessary.

The lawyers said the offers made so far did not cover all the lawsuits and included a number of families that have not filed litigation.

They would not reveal individual offers, saying the amounts varied according to circumstances, but they averaged about $267,000 a victim.

If the average compensation for the remaining victims is about the same the total payout would be about $73 million.

But John Kinnelly, an experienced lawyer in aviation lawsuits, said he believes the final total payment will be between $150 million and $200 million.

Slicks a headache for Texas tourism

CORPUS CHRISTI, Tex. (AP) — Thick swaths of runaway Gulf of Mexico crude oil in patches up to five metres long coated more than nine kilometres of South Padre Island beaches today.

It was the hardest blow yet to the multi-million-dollar vacation spot where tourism is reported off by 30 per cent.

Several kilometres of South Padre Island beaches at the tip of Texas were hit hard by incoming patches of oil during the night. Oil patches littered the beach area in front of the posh Bahia Mar hotel-condominium resort.

South Padre Island, the highlight of the South Texas coast for tourists, had escaped most of the oil before Wednesday night, receiving only scattered small tar balls and two larger globs.

India issues warning

NEW DELHI, (AP) — Prime Minister Charan Singh warned neighboring Pakistan on Wednesday that if it persists with a reported atomic bomb project Indian might alter its renunciation of nuclear weapons.

"It has been our decision and it remains our decision so far that we do not want to manufacture nuclear bombs, or join the race for nuclear weapons," he said in a nationwide broadcast at the celebration of the 32nd anniversary of India's independence.

"However, if Pakistan . . . continues in its efforts to manufacture the bomb, or stockpiling of these bombs, I and my colleagues will probably be forced to reconsider the entire question."

Soviet spacewalks for 40th birthday

MOSCOW — Soviet cosmonaut Valery Ryumin became 40 years old in space today and celebrated a day early by stepping out of the Salyut 6 space lab with commander Vladimir Lyakhov for a spacewalk that lasted an hour and 23 minutes.

The two have been in space a record 171 days.

Refitting protest persists

LE HAVRE, France (AP) — Almost 400 riot police early today freed a drawbridge being held by angry French dock workers but a tugboat strike prevented the luxury liner France — the world's largest liner — from leaving its home port for refitting in West Germany.

Tugboat crews still refuse to tow the liner to sea.

The General Confederation of Labor, France's largest trade union, organized the blockade of the drawbridge and the other protests against the refitting being done outside France.

No time for sadness

One of the most sensitive comments on the death of John Diefenbaker was made this morning by Stanley Knowles, one of the last surviving veterans of Dief's era on the Canadian political scene.

"When somebody dies at the age of 83," said Knowles, "it isn't a time for sadness. It is a time for a celebration of a life well lived."

For few Canadians could a larger celebration be held than for Diefenbaker. In a career that spanned six decades, he won respect and admiration from Canadians as lawyer, as legislator, and finally as prime minister.

When he was first elected to the House of Commons in 1940, he was already known as a prominent lawyer with a deep dedication to human rights and civil liberties. That dedication remained throughout his political career and led to the enactment of the Canadian Bill of Rights under his stewardship. Many consider it the greatest legislative accomplishment of his government.

His reputation increased during his 17 years in opposition in the Commons, and less than six months after being elected Tory leader in 1957, he was elected prime minister.

In the late 1950s he touched the dreams of millions of Canadians with his visions of northern development and of justice for all. He saw the potential of what Canada might be, and he encouraged its citizens to see it too. In following the dream, they gave him the largest majority of seats in Parliament ever received by any Canadian prime minister.

The tragedy of his administration was that he could not bring those dreams to reality. Beset by economic difficulties throughout the country and differences of opinion within his party, his government was reduced to minority status and then, only a year, later defeated by the Pearson Liberals.

The conflicts within the party increased until Robert Stanfield replaced Diefenbaker as leader in 1967.

Yet, politically, Diefenbaker survived. He remained active in the House of Commons as the Grand Old Man of Canadian politics. He could not become an elder statesman; politics was too much in his blood for him to give up the partisan battles for the neutral diplomacy of the statesman.

But he could and did become a solitary hero, a guardian to ensure the rights of Canadians built up in the past were preserved. And most of all, he became an ever-present memory of the Canadian vision, a constant reminder of the future that is still ours to grasp.

He died still holding in his hand papers having to do with the political pursuit of that future. It was doubtless the way he would have wanted it — the final moments of a life well lived.

Poor BCR

Poor B.C. Railway. The unloved stepchild of the provincial government for more than half a century can't do anything right, it seems.

It was born amid scandals involving the first contractor which were never satisfactorily settled, because he fled to Seattle beyond the reach of the royal commission which investigated.

Fresh in every taxpayer's mind are the recent exposes of ghastly cost overruns on its northern "frontier extensions." There was the roadbed laid through the muskeg to Fort Nelson on sheets of plywood, because the boggy soil swallowed up too much gravel and the railway had a politically imposed deadline to meet.

Now the BCR is being criticized again — this time for setting its construction standards too high.

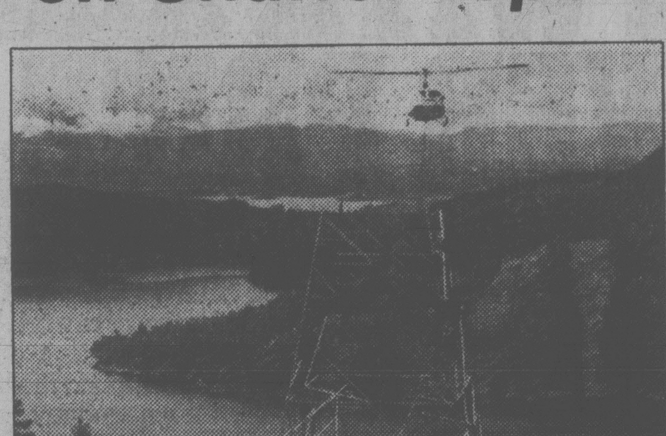
A report by Swan Wooster Engineering on the BCR's proposals for rail lines into northeastern coal deposits rebukes the railway for being excessively cautious and conservative in estimating the amount of work to be done to build a rail line.

You'll remember, of course, that the BCR was embarrassed when it first became known how ridiculously low and casually calculated its estimates were for the Dease Lake and Fort Nelson extensions. This time the BCR apparently tried to play it safe and err on the high side.

Swan Wooster, though, chastizes the Crown corporation for this very caution. According to the consultants, the B.C. Railway was planning construction standards for the coal line which were higher than the CPR mainline which carries at least twice as much traffic as that contemplated for the BCR extension.

How long will it take the BCR to find a happy medium?

The facts on Shaffer report



Transmission towers like these will be used on new line.

Recent press reports concerning the Cheekye-Dunsmuir transmission line, the so-called Marvin Shaffer report and myself, have, in my opinion, displayed a rather unfortunate misunderstanding of the facts of the matter and the role my ministry plays in government.

Under the Environment and Land Use Act is constituted a committee of cabinet ministers, called the Environment and Land Use Committee, commonly known as ELUC. Acting as a resource group and technical adviser to ELUC is what is known as the secretariat. The secretariat often does research and projects at ELUC's request, but, it is most important to note, often undertakes projects on its own initiative.

Confusion is generated by the fact that the secretariat is paid out of the budget of the ministry of environment, making it appear as if it reports to me, not to ELUC. This very fundamental error has unfortunately been constantly made in the Cheekye-Dunsmuir matter.

As minister of the environment, it is not part of my duty to assess the need, or, if you will, justification of power projects. That is essentially the task of the ministry of energy, mines and petroleum resources, with the final decision resting in the cabinet. While I have responsibility as a minister to participate in a government decision in the justification for a power project, it is not my ministry which takes the lead in such matters.

It is my ministry's responsibility, however, to see that any power project is carried out in accordance with sound environmental practices, and that environmental laws and regulations are obeyed. It is also my duty to see that the environmental impact of such a project is kept to a minimum.

It will be obvious that a report concerning the justification of the Cheekye-Dunsmuir power transmission would not be commissioned by me as minister of environment.

Allow me to therefore present the facts. On their own initiative, the secretariat decided to research the implications of a number of proposed power projects, including that involving the Cheekye-Dunsmuir transmission line. On June 7, completely to the surprise of ELUC, we received a report from the secretariat concerning Cheekye-Dunsmuir. This report did not mention a Dr. Shaffer, was unsigned, but was on the letterhead of the secretariat.

When I was questioned in the House as chairman of ELUC by Mr. Lockstead about a "Shaffer" report, I replied, in all honesty, that I did not have the faintest idea what he was talking about. I mentioned to him that I had an intergovernmental memorandum from the secretariat, (to which I have just referred) but that I had never heard of Dr. Shaffer. Quite frankly, I had assumed, that, in the mysterious ways that seem common in government, Mr. Lockstead had received a copy of the memorandum of the secretariat to ELUC.

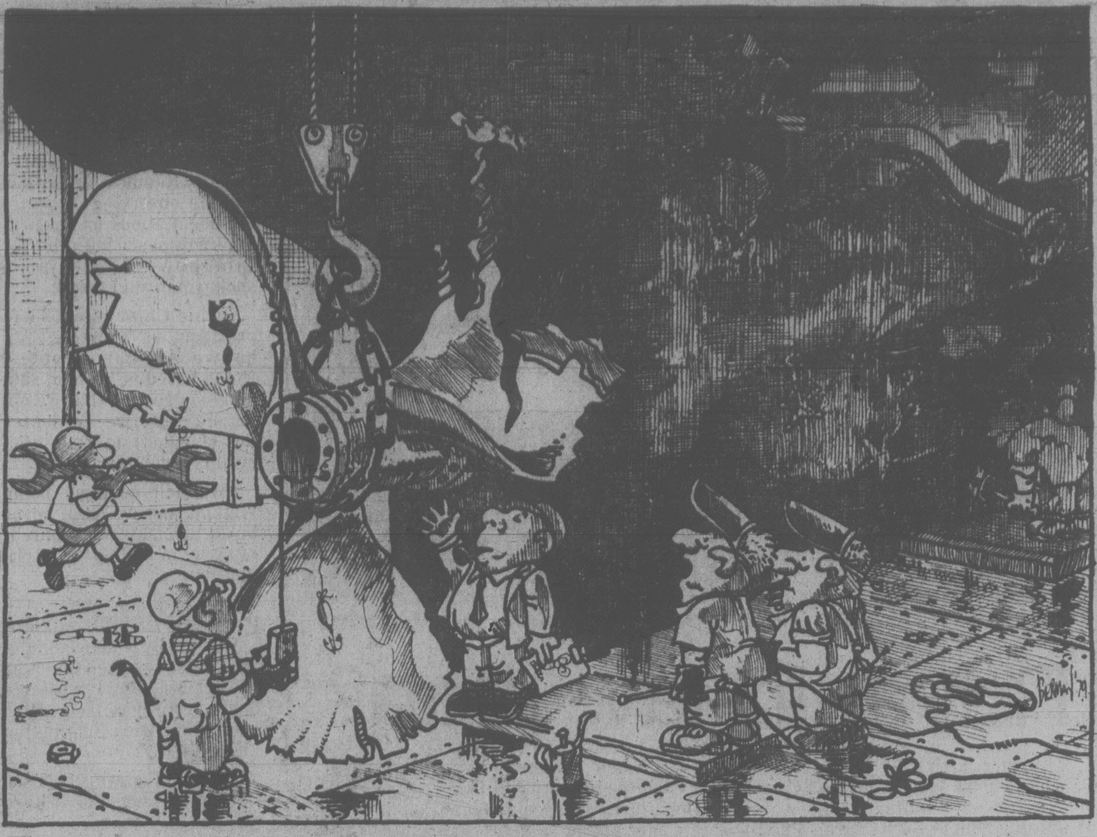
At that point, I probably committed a serious error in judgment I should have immediately followed the matter through and found out just what Mr. Lockstead was talking about; however, because of the pressure of the House and of ministerial duties, frankly, it slipped my mind. In all events, when Mr. Lockstead pressed the matter, I came to understand that the secretariat had indeed hired Dr. Marvin Shaffer, and that the memorandum they sent to ELUC substantially incorporated his views.

At the earliest opportunity, I consutled with my colleague who is indeed responsible for energy matters, James Hewitt, as a result of which we sought approval at the next cabinet meeting the release of that document. It was decided at the cabinet meeting that in all fairness, the document ought to be put to the B.C. Energy Commission and B.C. Hydro, since Dr. Shaffer had been somewhat critical of their reports; thereupon reports of all three should be released to the public in order to present a balanced picture. (May I point out that during this time, I had no way of knowing when the House was going to adjourn and, I can assure you I was not trying to avoid placing it before the House.)

After the decision to release had been made, I was asked by a senior reporter from one of the newspapers if I would ensure that release coincided with his deadline, to which I agreed. The earliest date when the matter was technically ready for release was Aug. 3. However, unfortunately it did not arrive in my office until just after the deadline mentioned. I therefore instructed my staff to release it first thing the following week, which was done.

One final note, if I may. I had no way of knowing that B.C. Hydro were going to make an announcement the same day concerning the cables to be used. To say that I am angry at the timing of this announcement would be a gross understatement.

The impression seems to be abroad that I had the responsibility for and the power to decide whether or not the Cheekye-Dunsmuir transmission proposal was jutified and that I allowed it to go ahead with a standing adverse report in my possession. However innocently this impression has been conveyed, it it totally erroneous. — K. Rafe Mair, Minister of the Environment.



". . . I feel sort of responsible — I was fishing in Active Pass that day . . ."

Labels have lost meaning

Anyone who has a decent respect for the English language must be outraged to hear the government threaten various crown corporations with "privatization" — a bastard word, conceived without wedlock or benefit of dictionary.

But apart from the corrupt semantics, what national policy are we actually debating? Where are Canada, and the societies of the western world, moving? Toward more individual liberty and freer business competition or toward more governmental control and what Hilaire Belloc called the servile state?

The answer to this profound question is unlikely to be found in the myths and election dodges of politics since they merely reflect the immediate, superficial course of human events. To understand, or at least to guess, the true motion of our times we must distinguish the deep flow of the social current from the brief side eddies.

Obsolete abstractions

For the moment the conventional wisdom holds that North America is moving away from big government, economic regulation, bureaucracy and high taxes. In Washington, the famous Proposition 13 and in Ottawa the proposed sale of Petro-Canada, are said to demonstrate a sure return to the old verities. And anyone who suspects that we may be groping in the opposite direction will be accused of favoring it, even if he deplores the whole process.

At this point the great debate becomes ideological, almost theological, as if logic of any sort governed our free society.

The so-called capitalist rejoices in the rediscovery of America's native genius. The so-called socialist comforts himself with the hope of some future government rescuing a mismanaged economy from its private managers.

But in the classic definition of those terms no capitalists or socialists are in charge of western governments nowadays. The labels have lost their meaning and we debate obsolete abstractions as ideology yields to practical necessity.

Thus the American people are told that their government is limiting its intervention in economic affairs while it is vainly trying to limit wages, profits and prices. The Canadian people are told that their government is determined to privatize (forgive the dreadful word) as many state functions as possible.

So, doubtless, it should. But when the continent faces a desperate energy shortage who is expected to master the crisis? Do our neighbors turn to private enterprise for a solution? Do they petition General Motors, Bell Telephone, U.S. Steel or Citibank, for instance, to bail them out?

No, they ask President Jimmy Carter to solve their problems by some easy magic and often blame him for inventing them. Among other troubled interests the huge Chrysler Corporation and its workers seek a $1 billion infusion of government money, just as many bankrupt railways have fled to the womb of the national treasury. Nowhere else is there enough money to deal with the crisis.

In Canada, Pierre Trudeau used to warn us that the market system no longer worked satisfactorily and, of course, it can't when it is obstructed by the giants of government, business and labor. They quarrel, make up and hand on their costs to the public.

Now Prime Minister Joe Clark wistfully hopes that the market will be restored, somehow, to its original pristine purity (which never really existed).

But do you see the manufacturers of clothing and footwear demonstrating on Parliament Hill against protective tariffs and import quotas because they violate the market? Do you see prosperous senior citizens lining up at government offices to surrender their uncashed old age pension cheques? Or the civil servants demanding that their pensions be unindexed like those of most taxpayers? Or the labor unions welcoming the wage competition of the unorganized workers?

Again, who recently increased the price of dairy products? Was it the market. No, it was the state, through one of its minor agencies, as another fixes the price of eggs.

If you fish in the sea and sell your catch without a licence, or exclusive franchise, you will end in jail. As a consequence of these tidy arrangements few Canadian families eat our salmon, which only the rich Japanese can afford. We sell it to them in exchange for their fine automobiles, preferring efficient transportation to the best food.

More complicated

In this ideological mishmash and the quaint solemnities of politics no one knows where society is going, but then, no one ever did in any earlier time.

Ah, if only things were as simple as the contemporary prophets of Adam Smith's free, automatic and infallible market suppose, if only the state had the wisdom that the socialists assume (when it can't even run the post office), if only the human being were logical and sinless we should need no government, no laws, no debate at all.

Since things are getting more complicated, interdependent and precarious every day, society does what it has to do, usually in contradiction of its myths and imagined principles. Afterward, the results will be known as a system. It is neither capitalistic nor socialistic but an amalgam of many conflicting elements in constant flux. Miraculously it works better than the systems based on force and consistent logic, that hobgoblin of little minds.

The tension between the state and the individual, as old as civilization, will continue so long as society remains free. Our system is sufficiently flexible, experimental and illogical to absorb change, though always resisting it, to accommodate almost anything, even its governments.

Doesn't know why

In response to the letter by Wendy Whiteway, Now I Know Why, which appeared in the Victoria Times on Aug. 7:

She does not know why and it's unfortunate that such a law-abiding citizen such as herself, who admittedly ignores road signs, is able with a slip of the pen to create in the minds of the reading public an erroneous image of the people who have chosen a career designed for the protection of the public with a further obligation to assist those incarcerated to help themselves return to the community a more useful and constructive citizen.

If she felt set back by the so-called "diatribe of insults and threats" by the officer involved, then she is certainly justified in seeking out some form of retribution. However, her method in madness does little but leave a group of individuals on the defensive for a thankless and potentially dangerous job.

Her insinuating comment that correctional officers (guards) are the cause of inmate rebellion is ridiculous — a selfish response to an incident which leaves others to prejudge my conduct, sincerity and moral standard. In a modern, advancing and human rights-orientated society compared to a slow-moving parliamentary system and bureaucratic red tape, friction in institutions is bound to occur. Working within these guidelines, I and others are not exempt from sharing responsibility and therefore subject to justifiable criticism but not singled out as "the cause" as the letter insinuates.

It is very seldom that one reads of newsworthy incidents occurring at William Head. Therefore it should be obvious to Wendy and the public that those individuals who work in the institution, management and staff alike, are doing their jobs and the inmates themselves are individually concerned over their own efforts to achieve earliest possible release. — Collin R. Thompson, Correctional Officer, William Head Medium Security Insitution.

Faculties object

The Confederation of University Faculty Associations of British Columbia, representing university faculty members in this province, wishes publicly to record its dismay at the procedure followed by the legislative assembly in giving degree-granting powers to Trinity Western College, Langley. We do not intend to express any opposition to Trinity Western College. We wish to address ourselves to the procedure which the government has permitted in this case, a procedure that will discredit British Columbia before the international academic community.

Possession of a university degree from British Columbia should always mean that one's university has satisfied rigorous public scrutiny as to its academic standards and objectives. It is all too easy to devalue the currency by allowing a proliferation of institutions licensed to grant degrees. Section 82 of the Universities Act of British Columbia seeks to guard against any such erosion of academic qualifications by stating: "No person shall in the province hold itself out or be known as a university, or grant degrees in its own name except in accordance with powers granted under this act." The members who voted for the passage of the recent private member's bill chose, cavalierly, to brush aside this requirement. The government did not even consider it necessary to reconcile these two conflicting pieces of legislation. Section 82 of the Universities Act might as well not exist.

Such procedures expose the province to ridicule. A B.C. institution may now grant degrees after only the most cursory examination by the select standing committee on standing orders and private bills. This power, moreover, has been given in the teeth of public objections by members of the universities council, the body empowered by the Universities Act to advise the government respecting the establishment of new universities and to approve the establishment of new degree programs.

It is hardly a service to Trinity Western College or its students to give legislative sanction to the awarding of degrees in a manner that will lead to those degrees being called into question. It is not the degrees of Trinity Western College alone, however, that will suffer. British Columbian qualifications in general stand to be dicredited by this procedure. — Laurenda Daniells, President, Confederation of University Faculty Associations of British Columbia.

The Diefenbaker Years

He was proud of the niche he carved in Canadian history and nothing he did ever seemed to be in half measure

Canadian Press

As a history buff, John George Diefenbaker was proudly aware of the historical niche he carved in 1958 when, with rolling oratory directed at "my fellow Canadians," he won the biggest parliamentary majority in Canada's history.

Nine years later in a contrary context he said: "I am still making history." He had just suffered the humiliation of being toppled from the leadership of his Conservative party, placing fifth on the first ballot.

Nothing Diefenbaker did ever seemed to be in half measure, whether as prime minister from 1957 to 1963 or in opposition.

And during more than three mercurial decades in Parliament, the intense Prairie orator stimulated an all-or-nothing reaction. He was fought and fawned upon, loved and loathed as he roared through Canada's political history, turning defeats into victory and transforming victories into defeat.

"When anyone counts me out [illegible] the way, I count myself right back in again," he once proclaimed.

Blazing blue eyes afire, threatening forefinger stabbing the air, Diefenbaker was at his combative best when under political attack or sensing what he regarded as an injustice.

Others made mistakes — on many occasions — in predicting his political demise. But so did he.

"My course has come to an end," he said when the 1967 leadership convention ousted him from power a decade after he led the Conservatives out of the political wilderness to take over the government of Canada.

Later he said it was unlikely his voice would again be heard in the House of Commons, where it had thundered since 1940.

But he was wrong

But he was wrong on both counts. Quietly licking his wounds, the old warrior thought seriously of dropping out of Parliament when the 1968 general election was called. But these thoughts were short-lived.

He went back to Prince Albert "among the people" and plunged into another campaign, this time free from the rigors of coast-to-coast travel a leader must endure. He appeared revitalized as he walked along dusty main streets, shaking hands and dropping into stores to greet workers on a first-name basis.

"I don't campaign; I just go out and meet the people."

The chief went back to Ottawa with an 8,871-vote majority. No longer prime minister, nor even a designated party critic for any department, he remained a dominating figure. Observers talked about Diefenbaker's "last" session and a national magazine wrote about "the last hurrah," but the curtain was far from falling.

It was clear he did not need a specific government department to criticize; he had his own projects. It was not long before the Trudeau Liberal government felt the heat about its alleged indifferent attitude toward royalty and other traditions.

Diefenbaker's unrelenting attack resulted in reversal of a policy that would have substituted the word "Police" for "RCMP", on cars and buildings.

"This government won't be satisfied until all semblance of royalty is in the garbage can," he declared.

He became the self-appointed protector of the RCMP, the old military regiments, the royal coat of arms on mail boxes and vehicles, and any other historic symbol he felt was in danger.

Old fire returned

And gradually, the old fire returned. The accusing finger was stabbing the air again and speaking invitations poured in from across the country.

By the time the 1972 federal election rolled around, there was no doubt that the Prince Albert Conservative would run once again. This time he led his nearest opponent by more than 10,000 votes.

Going back to his front-row seat in the Commons, Diefenbaker picked up where he left off, blasting the Trudeau government in public and taking the odd swipe at his own party in private. His was a one-man show, without benefit of caucus discussions, designated questions or party disciplines, and he continued to be one of the most effective MPs in the House.

His attitude toward Robert Stanfield, his successor as party leader, remained politely cool. Stanfield responded with delicate respect for the old chief, who continued to have a solid group of admirers on the back benches.

There was no mention of his quitting Parliament when, on Dec. 22, 1976, his second wife — the former Olive Palmer, a widowed schoolteacher — died at home in the exclusive Ottawa suburb of Rockcliffe. Diefenbaker had relied on her increasingly to jog his memory and repeat anecdotes that he missed as his hearing slowly failed.

He cried when she died, and his eyes would mist when people spoke of her. But he said he promised her he would continue in public life, and after a brief vacation in Barbados where he had written part of his three-volume set of memoirs, he was back in his place in Parliament, and back at his old routine.

He continued to command attention in the Commons, although in his latest years he was perhaps regarded more as a historical curiosity than a force to be reckoned with. Government MPs who at one time trembled when the Chief thundered, took to grinning when he spoke.

His power dwindled

Diefenbaker's power within his own party also dwindled.

When Conservatives chose Joe Clark as their leader at a February, 1976, convention, Diefenbaker sided in the end with the runner-up, Quebec MP Claude Wagner. Clark treated him as a grand old man, but the two weren't close. Clark was more than 40 years his junior.

As Diefenbaker's power waned, his list of honors grew. He was appointed Companion of Honor by the Queen, on Jan. 1, 1976, one of a select group of 65 distinguished Commonwealth citizens.

Plaques in his honor were placed in the Commons lobby, in schools, in public buildings. A lake formed by the Saskatchewan River Dam at Cutbank, Sask., was named after him. University of Saskatchewan in Saskatoon — recipient of most of his historical papers — devoted a memorial centre. His list of honorary degrees, awards and achievements filled two full pages in the parliamentary guide.

During his long and turbulent political career, he rose from the back benches to lead the Conservatives into office in 1957 after his party had been 22 years in opposition.

Tossed out of office six years later, he fought for a comeback, never making it, but nevertheless preventing the Liberals of Lester Pearson from gaining a clear majority in the elections of 1963 and 1965.

Few knew him intimately. Even fewer understood him fully.

Political setbacks

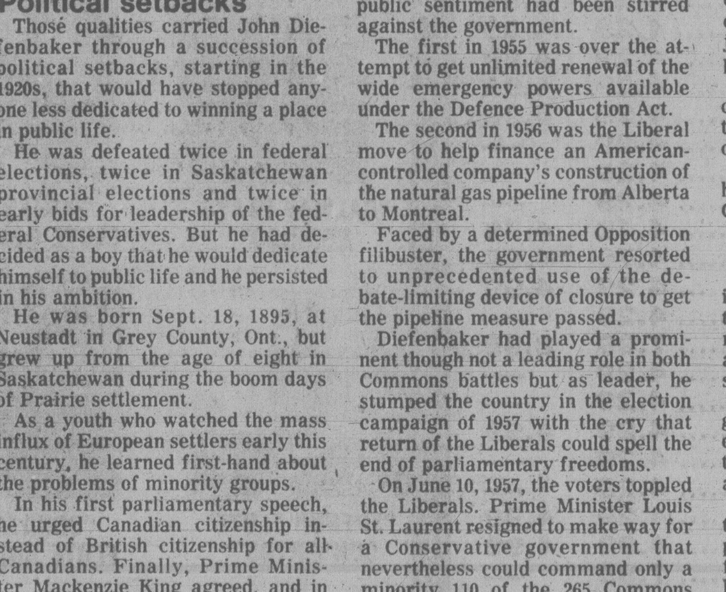
Those qualities carried John Diefenbaker through a succession of political setbacks, starting in the 1920s, that would have stopped anyone less dedicated to winning a place in public life.

He was defeated twice in federal elections, twice in Saskatchewan provincial elections and twice in early bids for leadership of the federal Conservatives. But he had decided as a boy that he would dedicate himself to public life and he persisted in his ambition.

He was born Sept. 18, 1895, at Neustadt in Grey County, Ont., but grew up from the age of eight in Saskatchewan during the boom days of Prairie settlement.

As a youth who watched the mass influx of European settlers early this century, he learned first-hand about the problems of minority groups.

In his first parliamentary speech, he urged Canadian citizenship instead of British citizenship for all Canadians. Finally, Prime Minister Mackenzie King agreed, and in 1946 the Canadian Citizenship Act was passed.



AN AVID FISHERMAN, Diefenbaker lines up beside three coho salmon he caught during a 1977 stop in Campbell River.

That became a source of pride to Diefenbaker, whose great-grandfather had emigrated from Holland around 1815 to settle at York — now Toronto. The family name was originally Diefenbacker but grandfather George Diefenbacker, a noted carriage-maker in western Ontario, dropped the "c" during the 1890s.

His father was a school teacher who at the start of the century moved his family frequently. In 1903 he finally moved to a school near Fort Carlton in western Saskatchewan.

When John was 14 his father settled in Saskatoon where John and younger brother Elmer could get better schooling. The father became land titles clerk and later, for 28 years, a federal customs officer.

John went on to acquire a master of arts degree at University of Saskatchewan in 1916 at the age of 20 and then went overseas as a lieutenant in the 196th Western University Battalion. The next year Diefenbaker — the first veteran to become Canadian prime minister — was injured in France and was invalided back to Canada.

Two years later he graduated in law and began practice in the village of Wakaw, Sask. On his 24th birthday he won his first jury trial at Humboldt defending a man accused of shooting his neighbor.

Subsequently Diefenbaker built up a reputation as one of the West's most successful criminal lawyers.

A move from Wakaw to Prince Albert in 1924 not only marked the start of major successes as a lawyer but also gave him new scope for political ambitions.

Twice, in 1925 and 1926, he ran unsuccessfully as federal candidate in Prince Albert. The second time he almost lost his election deposit in a contest against Liberal chieftain Mackenzie King, trailing 4,838 votes to 8,933. In 1929 and 1938 he lost, by narrow margins, attempts at election to the Saskatchewan legislature. Between 1937 and 1940 he was provincial Conservative leader when his party had no members in the legislature.

Married twice

He married, in 1929, Edna Mae Brower, but they had no children. His first wife died early in 1951 and on Dec. 8, 1953, he married Olive Palmer.

During the 22 years of Liberal administration, there had only been two all-out Commons battles in which public sentiment had been stirred against the government.

The first in 1955 was over the attempt to get unlimited renewal of the wide emergency powers available under the Defence Production Act.

The second in 1956 was the Liberal move to help finance an American-controlled company's construction of the natural gas pipeline from Alberta to Montreal.

Faced by a determined Opposition filibuster, the government resorted to unprecedented use of the debate-limiting device of closure to get the pipeline measure passed.

Diefenbaker had played a prominent though not a leading role in both Commons battles but as leader, he stumped the country in the election campaign of 1957 with the cry that return of the Liberals could spell the end of parliamentary freedoms.

On June 10, 1957, the voters toppled the Liberals. Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent resigned to make way for a Conservative government that nevertheless could command only a minority 110 of the 265 Commons seats. The first Diefenbaker administration began June 21, 1957, followed by the March 31, 1958, election which sent 208 Conservatives to Ottawa, up to the time the greatest number of MPs for any government since Confederation.

In the throne speech at the opening of Parliament in 1958 the Progressive Conservative government proposed enactment of a bill of rights on subjects within federal jurisdiction and passed it two years later.

Diefenbaker repeatedly expressed concern over the extent of U.S. control in various segments of the economy.

Foreign investment was welcome, he said, but it must expect to serve Canadian purposes.

Trouble mounted

At first slowly, then with increasing speed, difficulties mounted. First there were uproars over cutting off manufacture of the Arrow jet fighter and changing the basis of federal subsidies to Newfoundland.

Looking back over the Diefenbaker government years, political observers generally regard his handling of the Arrow as the first dent in the administration's armor.

He announced in September, 1958, that the Bomarc-B missile was being put into the North American Air Defence (NORAD) system with installations near La Macaza, Que., and North Bay, Ont., and that the Arrow project would be "reviewed." The review really meant the end of the Arrow, but few — particularly aircraft workers — believed it.

Development work on the revolutionary supersonic jet fighter had been started by A. V. Roe Ltd., under the previous Liberal government. Expenditures had mounted to $500 million and more was needed.

In February, 1959, he announced in the Commons the project was being cancelled. The final decision came as a blow to 13,000 aircraft workers at Malton, near Toronto. The aircraft industry as a whole faced uncertainty for years. Many of the country's best aeronautical engineers moved to the U.S.

After two years in office, there was mounting criticism that Diefenbaker ran a one-man show.

Diefenbaker, described by his Western friends and supporters as a Prairie radical by nature, had no sympathy with big business and little understanding of the fine points of economic or monetary policy. He was inclined to blame the economists for not curing the country's ills, instead of listening to and weighing their advice.

While Governor James Coyne of the Bank of Canada was calling for belt-tightening attitudes to see Canada through its unusual difficulties and to guard against future dangers, Diefenbaker and his cabinet were preaching expansion.

The two conflicting policies led inevitably to battle, but it was fought more on a question of principle than of policy. Which was to be in command — the Bank of Canada with its powerful and independent role in managing the country's money or the political leaders of the government in charge of taxation and answerable to the voters? The government tried to fire the bank chief but stubbed its toe.

Diefenbaker left the generalship of this 1961 battle to his minister of finance, Donald Fleming, but played his part in a major skirmish in questioning Coyne's propriety in presiding over a bank meeting which increased the retirement pensions for bank governors.

A tactical move also was Diefenbaker's responsibility in refusing to allow a Commons committee study of a bill to declare Coyne's job vacant. He and his ministers spoke bitingly of a Liberal brain trust and establishment in the civil service, and thereby lost support of large numbers of junior civil servants as well.

The Coyne ouster bill was shelved by the Senate, with its Liberal majority composed of appointees of previous Liberal governments. Coyne thereupon resigned, in July, 1961.

Tories lost heavily

All these circumstances were grist for the Opposition political mill.

In April, 1962, Diefenbaker set the date for a general election in June, charging the Opposition with obstruction and delaying tactics in the Commons.

Liberal leader Lester Pearson said Diefenbaker was saying in effect that he could no longer govern with 203 Conservatives in a 265-seat House unless the Opposition gave up the exercise of its cherished rights of carrying out its duties."

Diefenbaker fully expected to lose some seats.

But in the voting, the Conservatives lost five middle-string and junior ministers, and had its majority control cut to minority status in the Commons. The result: 116 Conservatives, 100 Liberals, 49 others.

When Diefenbaker met Parliament that fall it was with a badly shaken cabinet and party, a country facing complex and nearly unfathomable economic difficulties, and an Opposition whose appetites had been whetted by electoral gains.

Brewing in the background was the nuclear arms issue — whether U.S. nuclear warheads should be brought on to Canadian soil to arm the Bomarcs and RCAF jets already acquired to carry them. In a little more than a month the issue boiled up to explosive force, and the Diefenbaker government was defeated in the Commons.

On Jan. 3, 1963, Gen. Lauris Norstad, retiring supreme commander of NATO forces in Europe, said in a departing press conference in Ottawa that Canada was committed to accepting nuclear warheads for its NATO forces, and wouldn't be fulfilling the commitment until it did so.

The opposition Liberal and Social Credit groups proposed non-confidence motions. Defence Minister Douglas Harkness resigned as defence minister, saying his views in support of acquiring nuclear warheads were irreconcilable with those of Diefenbaker. The next day the government was defeated, Parliament was dissolved and the new election called for Aprl 8, 1963.

But the political tide was in fact running with the Liberals and against the Diefenbaker candidates. Voting on April 8, 1963, gave Pearson's Liberals 129 seats in the 265-seat House — the largest group, but short of a majority. The Conservatives slipped to 95. Diefenbaker and his government resigned April 22.

But Diefenbaker began to "count myself right back in again" and set about to rebuild his fortunes and regain the prime ministership.

He survived a February, 1964, attempt to unseat him as party head but another crisis was on horizon.

It came in the 1965 election campaign in which the Conservatives prevented the Liberals from winning a majority. Although supporters rallied around the 70-year-old Diefenbaker, who won his ninth personal electoral victory, dissatisfaction with his leadership became more vocal. Party members began to rally around Dalton Camp, the national Tory president, who began stumping the country calling for a leadership review.

At a bitter convention in Ottawa in November, 1966, Camp's forces won the day.

The results of the first ballot were: Robert Stanfield 519; former Manitoba premier Duff Roblin 349; former justice minister E. Davie Fulton 343; former trade minister George Hees 295; Diefenbaker 271.

His support dwindling, he scribbled out his withdrawal notice. It was all over.

Ardent fisherman

An ardent fisherman, he once said his favorite sport was going after lake trout in northern Saskatchewan lakes with light tackle. After he became prime minister he found a fishing spot in the Gatineau Hills a few miles from the capital where he could get away for a few hours of relaxation occasionally.

The year-book at University of Saskatchewan, when he graduated, predicted he would become Opposition leader in the Commons.

He fulfilled that prophecy for only six months in 1957 before he was able to go it one better.

Remembrances of a great Canadian

The 10 provincial premiers meeting at Pointe-au-Pic, Que., issued a communique today expressing their profound sadness at the death of the Right Honourable John George Diefenbaker.

"Together, the Premiers mourn the passing of his outstanding Canadian," the communique states:

"'The Chief' devoted his entire life to the pursuit of great causes. His passionate commitment to his country and his pursuit of justice and human rights inspired enormous respect and affection. The Canadian Bill of Rights will be a lasting memorial to his leadership."

Other distinguished Canadians added their tributes:

George Hees, a minister in Diefenbaker's first cabinet, said today he admired the former prime minister for his statesman-like qualities and his human qualities.

"I consider that Mr. Diefenbaker was a great leader both in opposition and as prime minister," Hees said.

Diefenbaker was an outstanding Canadian and a "man of the House of Commons," says veteran New Democratic MP Stanley Knowles.

Knowles, MP for Winnipeg North Centre, said Diefenbaker was "already an outstanding member of Parliament" when he first entered the Commons in 1942. Diefenbaker had been elected two years before.

The Winnipeg MP recalled that Diefenbaker asked him to be Speaker of the House of Commons when the Conservative leader became prime minister in 1957.

"I turned it down and for years he could hardly be civil with me. He was quite annoyed with me that I turned it down."

But he and Diefenbaker again became friends when Knowles and the Conservative leader's wife, Olive, discovered their ancestors both came to the United States from Britain on the Mayflower centuries ago. "From then on, John and I were very good friends."

"He will be very much missed all across Canada by people of every political party. He was a very popular man. He will be particularily missed by all his colleagues in the Commons."

Ellen Fairclough, the first woman ever appointed to cabinet when Diefenbaker made her secretary of state in 1957, said today the late former prime minister has left an indelible mark on Canadian history.

"He was a very controversial character, but a very colorful character. He was quite easily the most colorful public character since John A. Macdonald."

"He built a name and a reputation that will last a long time in Canada," former Newfoundland premier Joseph Smallwood said in paying tribute to Diefenbaker.

Smallwood said he and Diefenbaker were frequently at odds between 1957 and 1963 when the Conservatives were in power in Ottawa.

One of the fiercest battles between the former Liberal premier and Diefenbaker came about when the then prime minister announced plans to end federal transfer payments of $8 million annually to Newfoundland.

The payments were provided for under term 29 of the terms of union between Canada and Newfoundland signed at Confederation in 1949.

The dispute eventually ended in Newfoundland's favor with the defeat of the Diefenbaker government by the Liberals under the late Lester B. Pearson. The Liberals extended the term of the payments indefinitely and they still are being made.

Diefenbaker also forbade the use of RCMP by Smallwood during a bitter loggers' strike in 1958 and the two battled again over ownership of a wartime United States base in St. John's when it was abandoned by the U.S. in 1960.

"It was all very bitter at the time," Smallwood said.

He said that although the political arguments were vicious there was no aftermath of personal enmity.

Diefenbaker will be known for his dedication to the interests of the average Canadian and for the Canadian Bill of Rights, Federal Fisheries Minister James McGrath said today.

McGrath said he was one of the Progressive Conservatives elected to Parliament in 1957 when Diefenbaker formed a minority government.

"What struck me about him was his ability to turn the Conservative Party which had been in opposition into a populist party that reflected the interests of the average Canadian."

Senator Alasdair Graham, Liberal party president, says Diefenbaker "probably loved Parliament and its institutions more than anyone else."

"Rarely does a country produce an individual of such monumental presence," Graham said.

"Mr. Diefenbaker's well-known vision of Canada and all its regions typified his faith in the country and his concern for its future.

"Regardless of political differences, people on all sides respected his unique loyalties, his strong convictions and his unwavering dedication.

Walter Baker, government House leader, said he cannot imagine Parliament without Diefenbaker, an active member of the Commons since 1940.

"Although he was of great age, we were looking forward to opening Parliament with him," Baker said only moments after learning that the former prime minister had died.

"I've known him in good years and in lean years. He's the kind of fellow where you can say there won't be another one like him.

"I think that a Parliament without his voice and presence is difficult to imagine."

The former prime minister died before he could see one of his dreams — the opening of the Dempster Highway in the Yukon — become a reality, colleague Walter Dinsdale said.

Dinsdale, who served as Diefenbaker's northern development minister in the last three years of his administration, was to go to the Yukon with Diefenbaker Friday for the official opening of the highway.

Dinsdale said the proposal for the highway — "one of our roads to resources" — was dreamed up during the Diefenbaker years.

"Now after all this time it has finally been completed and The Chief was to have the great honor of opening it."

Unity plea Diefenbaker last hurrah

OTTAWA (CP) — John Diefenbaker, who fought throughout his political life for what he called one Canada, expressed grave concerns in his last public interview for the unity of the country.

"I have never seen it as divided as it is today," the former Progressive Conservative prime minister told a panel of reporters Friday during the taping of an interview for broadcast on the CTV television network.

"Suspicion, fear, all those things that deny unity are present . . .," Diefenbaker said, adding that pessimism is especially present among young Canadians who wrote to him.

"They write me about their most innermost ideas and thoughts. They're worried about Canada, what the future will be, is there that strong spiritual basis without which nations cannot survive?"

For many youths, disgruntlement with Canada occurs because they perceive laws as being administered unjustly, he said.

Diefenbaker's latest cause celebre had been the sentencing of Jacques and Louise Cossette-Trudel, convicted kidnappers of British dioplomat James Cross during the Front de Liberation du Quebec terrorism of October, 1970.

Diefenbaker was concerned that the kidnappers received two years for their crime while hundreds of youths are being jailed for longer periods for "some little marijuana thing."

Guarding civil liberties was one of Diefenbaker's chief priorities from his days as a brash criminal lawyer in Saskatchewan.

"I always followed the course through the years at the bar that poverty was no passport to prison and however poor a person was I would take his case if I thought it was a just one. That's the reason that I built up across this country a reputation in that regard."

Diefenbaker, never known as a great fan of Joe Clark, was asked during the interview to assess the new prime minister's performance.

"He's doing as well as I expected."

A reporter then asked: "Well, how well did you expect him to do?"

Diefenbaker replied: "Exceptionally well. I'm glad you asked that additional thing."

Since the death in December, 1972, of Lester Pearson, Diefenbaker had been the sole living former prime minister until the May 22 election turfed Pierre Trudeau out of office.

Diefenbaker, in his familiar tongue-in-cheek style, told the interviewers: "As a matter of fact, it was a most lonesome position that I was in, the only former prime minister in Parliament. It's a lonely position, and now I have company."

Now Trudeau must play that lonesome role.

Throughout his last days, Diefenbaker talked excitedly about his planned trip next month to China for a state visit.

"The reason for their attitude to me in this invitation is that when they were in great difficulty, famine stood over them; I directed the wheat board against an awful lot of members in the House of Commons to sell them wheat on credit.

"It was said, I remember Mr. Pearson, he shed tears of tremendous size. 'Oh,' he says, 'we're going to lose a fortune, this is awful.'

"I said, 'I don't say all Chinese are honest, they're not, no group is, but I've never known a Chinese to give his word to break it, and that's what's happened in this case."

The ensuing sales to China greatly aided Prairie farmers and their gratitude has been expressed in the ballot box since.

Diefenbaker, who opened many of his speeches by saying, "my fellow Canadians," ended the interview with a call to his fellow countrymen to remember their heritage and to continue to fight for the freedoms they enjoy.

"The boys and girls today don't have the pride in their country that they did in my generation. You bring to the attention of young people today the awful sacrifices of two world wars — it's nothing. They don't know about it.

"I think of my own class in university wiped out, wiped out within hours, of days, in the fall of 1916, and I'm here because I was injured accidentally.

"They loved life as we love life but until Canadians, and in particular young people, realize that it was only that sacrifice that made their freedom and our freedom possible, that we'll be able to start a feeling and a pride of Canada. I am a Canadian. I'm proud to be a Canadian."

Flags lowered

Flags at the Legislative buildings and city hall are at half mast today in memory of John Diefenbaker, who died today at his home in Ottawa.

The flags at the legislature will stay lowered until Diefenbaker's funeral.

Parking lot fuss parried

The president of a Sikh society today suggested residents upset about a temple parking lot being built in the Topaz-Blackwood area should take their complaints to city hall, not to the newspapers.

M.S. Randhawa, president of the Khalsa Diwan Society, said all the work is being done according to the city plan.

"The plan was approved by the city," he said.

Mr. and Mrs. Leslie Jones, 1142 Topaz, approached the newspapers with their concerns about the Sikh temple parking lot because they say they have been unable to get help from city hall, despite several phone calls and visits.

City council approved the use of two lots (the area is zoned for single-family dwellings) as a parking lot for the temple last October.

Since then, the Jones have seen what they term the "needless" axing of 11 oak trees. A three-foot-high picket fence they erected alongside their 135-foot-deep property was removed by a bulldozer.

When the Jones, both old-age pensioners, complained to temple officials about the fence, they were told not to worry because a retaining wall would be built.

Neighbor James Carmichael said the concrete retaining wall is inadequate and contains enough wood to light fires for a month.

Another claim by neighbors is that only two catch basins have been installed, instead of the five specified in the plans approved by city hall. The lack of proper catch basins has prompted fears of flooding of homes when it rains.

City assistant planning director Peter Crisp said plans for the lot include landscaping and screening. He said that if there is any non-compliance with the plans, the city will ensure that violations are remedied, even if the lot had to be torn up.

Randhawa recalled that all the neighbors in the area were called in before construction of the parking lot began, and that the opportunity to object was given then.

"This all can be proved," said Randhawa.

N-men 'amused' by Greenpeace

Nuclear scientists are puzzled and a bit amused by charges from Greenpeace that they are being used to lend credibility to a proposed nuclear installation on Vancouver Island.

The 600 scientists, including several Nobel prize winners, took an afternoon cruise on a CP Rail ferry to Nanaimo Wednesday and were met by anti-nuclear protesters.

The scientists are in B.C. attending the Eighth International Conference on High Energy Physics and Nuclear Structure at the University of B.C.

Greenpeace director Rod Marining issued a press release warning British Columbians that they are being manipulated.

Marining said the trip to Nanaimo could not be considered sightseeing or tourism when the scientists were being taken to a proposed nuclear site that has been known to B.C. residents for the last 10 years.

But conference organizers said the trip to the island was purely social.

Dr. Edward Auld, chairman of the local arrangements committee, said it was strictly a fun event.

"It's an afternoon's relaxation. We were going to catch a boat somewhere and the CP Rail ferry was the only one available and it happens to go to Nanaimo."

Auld said ther were no meetings or speeches slated in Nanaimo and no visits to any suggested nuclear power sites.

Auld said Greenpeace may have been confused by the name of the conference which includes the word energy, but that in fact it has to do with the energy of particles.

"We are discussing progress in trying to decide the forces that make up our system and not nuclear reactors at all," he said.

"Greenpeace was rather naughty because they phoned me before the conference. I sent them information and invited them. As far as I know no one from Greenpeace has shown up. Any resemblance between their news release and the truth is coincidental."

Marining later admitted in an interview he had hoped the scientists could be pressured into taking a stand against nuclear power.

"I see them as a pawn that could be used by either side."

Hospital sit-in continues

A sit-in by about 100 members of the Hospital Employees Union continued today at Nanaimo Regional Hospital.

The protest began Tuesday following the suspension of a 60-year-old man for refusing to go on a garbage pickup detail.

The hospital has applied to the Labor Relations Board for a cease-and-desist order and a board hearing was continuing this morning.

Those taking part in the sit-in work in the dietary, laundry and medical records departments as well as the business office.

John Nikitiuk, the hospital's assistant executive director, said today all elective surgery admissions have been cancelled as a result of the dispute but administrative personnel have been able to provide most of the services.

"There are no serious problems so far."

Co-op complaints to be investigated

Complaints by Marigold Housing Co-operative members have led to an investigation of its accounts and business operations by the ministry of consumer and corporate affairs.

A number of members asked for an investigation under the Co-operative Associations Act and posted a $500 bond to have the inquiry made.

There had been protests over an increase in assessments brought in by the co-operative's management and a number of members had asked for the dismissal of co-op manager William McElroy.

McElroy, a Victoria alderman, says he welcomes the inquiry as a means of clearing the air.

Hydro on lookout for new dam site

VANCOUVER (CP) — British Columbia Hydro is conducting engineering and environmental studies in the Stikine and Iskut rivers to determine if a hydroelectric dam can be built in northwestern B.C., a spokesman said Wednesday.

Engineering studies a year ago found a power potential of 2.5 million kilowatts which could help meet the province's future electricity needs during the 1990s, a corporation spokesman said in a press release.

About 50 Hydro and outside consultants are working in the area this summer on the project, which includes drilling to determine if the area has a suitable foundation for a dam and if adequate supplies of construction material exist, Hydro said.

The over-all scheme for both rivers could generate about 14 billion kilowatt hours of power annually. The W. A. C. Bennett dam on the Peace River produced 11.9 billion kilowatt hours for the year ended March 31.

Judge waives hooker charge

VANCOUVER (CP) — Alicia Allen made the mistake of asking a vice squad detective that same old question — but a provincial court judge ruled Wednesday it wasn't soliciting because she didn't pester him.

Judge Kerry Smith acquitted Allen of soliciting, ruling that the element of pestering was not present because Larry Yip, the officer, was quite willing to talk to Allen.

"How can a prostitute make her living if she is not allowed to approach a prospective customer?" the judge asked.

The city's chief prosecutor, however, does not consider the ruling a setback to the police department's campaign against prostitutes on Vancouver streets.

Bruce Donald said he is certain the acquittal will be appealed and that 20 to 30 similar charges pending will not be dropped.

"They (the police) haven't used all the weapons in their arsenal," he said.

Smith said some things stay the same.

"It's been some time since I have heard a soliciting case," he said during the trial. "The questions and answers don't appear to have changed over the past few years."

Vice squad detectives testified to seeing Allen approach three different men on the street.

Then, Yip said, Allen approached him at a downtown intersection and asked him: "Are you looking for a lady?"

She repeated the question and added: "For $50 you can have me . . . I won't rush you if you don't rush me."

They agreed on $50 and no rush for the service.

During the trial, prosecutor Ross Tweedale argued Allen was pressing and persistent in that she approached four men in about 30 minutes on May 14 in a downtown area, the last one being Yip.

Allen, 33, was the first to appear on the soliciting charge, one of a series which followed a police crackdown in May. The charges were the first since the Supreme Court of Canada overturned the conviction of Deborah Hutt of Vancouver in 1978.

The court said soliciting requires proof of pressing and persistent behavior. Smith said the evidence in the Allen case was almost identical.

As a result of the Supreme Court decision, 280 soliciting charges were dropped in Vancouver.

Donald said police will continue to lay charges.

Young resigns UN post after U.S. policy breach

Wolf met on two earlier occasions with a PLO representative but that they were unplanned encounters.

Wolf was not reprimanded for the meetings, State Department officials said, but was reminded that the incidents violated U.S. policy.

At the United Nations diplomats were shocked at Young's resignation and some said his departure will deprive Washington of an effective link to the Third World.

"The worst blow for U.S. prestige in recent years," commented a prominent non-aligned official.

Generally, it was felt that Young had done more than any of his predecessors to improve U.S. relations with the Third World, particularly with Africans and Arabs. Their diplomats trusted Young, even though their interests often clashed with those of the United States.

The Palestine Human Rights Campaign today deplored the resignation , saying U.S. desires for peace in the Middle East have been cast in doubt.

"The resignation of Andrew Young confirms our worst fears," it said in a statement. "The U.S. administration apparently can't be expected to deal rationally with the Israeli-Palestinian problem. Israel has become a national sacred cow.

"It's wrong for a great power to behave so cowardly. Open and frank discussion with the Palestinian leadership is imperative if there is to be peace. The sooner this is realized, the sooner peace will come."

Israel today dismissed Young's resignation as none of its business and said its concern centers on U.S. government policy and not individual officials.

In Tel Aviv, a foreign ministry spokesman said Israel was not so much concerned with Young's fate as it was with U.S. policy toward the PLO and U.N. Security Council resolutions on the Middle East.

Across the U.S., black leaders expressed dismay over the resignation of Young, but there appeared to be relatively little bitterness toward the Carter administration.

Most directed their anger at the diplomatic system that produced the controversy, and made no mention of President Carter in their statements.

However, one civil rights leader predicted that Young's resignation, over his unauthorized meeting with a representative of the PLO would mean trouble between blacks and Jews.

Georgia's influential state Sen. Julian Bond sounded perhaps the sternest note.

"Andy Young's firing is bad news for Jimmy Carter, who has lost his most vocal and most uncritical black supporter," he said. "It is bad news for black Americans.

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell choked with emotion and fought back tears as he read the president's letter accepting Young's resignation with "deep regret" and praising the former civil rights leader for turning in "a superb performance in a most difficult assignment."

Carter asked Young to remain at his post until a successor could be named, but made no effort to change the ambassador's mind, according to an informed source.

Young indicated that the decision to quit was his, but other sources said that Young did not have all that much choice.

Politically and emotionally, it was a severe blow to the president, who has said repeatedly that Young is the only individual to whom he owes a political debt. Young was Carter's principal bridge to black voters in 1976.

Young announced his resignation at a crowded State Department news conference after meeting with Carter at the White House. As always, he was outspoken and blunt, unrepentant and defiant of diplomatic conventions that hampered his "brutally frank" style.

It was clear to him, he said, that his unorthodox approach to diplomacy would never be understood .

Transition House: where battered wives start building new life

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

After six years in a logging camp 90 miles from civilization and steady abuse by an alcoholic husband, Janet was ready to call it quits.

She wanted to leave her husband, but was a virtual prisoner — he had the car keys and the money and she had the welfare of her three children to think about.

Ironically, a severe beating he gave her provided the chance to escape. Shortly after she entered hospital with a concussion, bruises and a broken rib, he was admitted to a detoxification centre in North Vancouver. After her release Janet (not her real name) gave the house a last ritual cleanup, piled her kids, dog and cat into the car, and took off.

Since she couldn't expect any emotional or financial help from disapproving relatives, Janet headed to Victoria's Transition House.

It turned out to be the best decision of her life, Janet says, because after a week at the house she felt better about herself than she had in a long time.

Transition House is a shelter for mentally and physically abused women and their children. It's in Fairfield but the address is not advertised to prevent unwanted visits from husbands.

Its aim is to provide a haven where women can pull their lives back together, and get moral support and counselling.

The house is one of three operating in B.C. and takes referrals from other parts of Vancouver Island.

Most of the referrals are made by police, the human resources ministry and community agencies like Crisis Line.

Last year the 12-bed house had a 50 to 70-per-cent occupancy rate each month. But since Christmas it's been a full house and the staff constantly turns people away.

Victoria needs another Transition House to handle the overload, says Sheila Waest, working as a summer public relations co-ordinator for the house.

One reason for its sudden popularity could be increasing awareness by women they don't have to put up with abuse.

"Women are talking about it more. Once they realize they aren't alone — that's the biggest step."

It's a greater problem than most people realize and not confined to the lower economic strata. Doctors, lawyers and businessmen are just as liable to abuse their families as men on welfare.

"We've had Corvettes as well as bicycles parked out in front of the house," Sheila says.

Most victims are between the ages of 20 and 45; but women as young as 16 and older than 65 also stay there.

About 60 per cent of them are suffering from some form of physical abuse, ranging from bruises to broken bones and stab wounds. Others have been battered emotionally and can't stand to live in the same house with their husbands.

But despite the diverse backgrounds, they all feel guilty, inadequate, and insecure. The emotional beatings they receive drive out all self-respect and confidence.

"After you live with that (abuse) for a certain period of time, you start to believe it's your fault," Waest says.

"You become just as sick as the men."

Many women balk at leaving home because they have young children to support, or because they are penniless and don't know about Transition House.

"A lot of women will stay in a situation because there is food on the table and a roof over their heads," staff member Wendy Buck explained.

Buck, a full-time staff member for about 15 months, said the last straw is often threats or actual violence to their children.

She estimates about 25 per cent of the women who stay at the house eventually return to their husbands. The rest are helped to find housing, jobs and legal counsel.

Since most women decide not to prosecute for one reason or other, the men responsible for brutal assaults against their wives usually get off scott-free.

Buck describes the problem as a "vicious circle" — wives who are beaten by their husbands often come from homes where they were beaten by their fathers. Boys who are abused grow up to abuse their wives.

The philosophy of Transition House has changed a lot since it started six years ago. Staff members are trying hard to convey their change in attitude to the public and their professional contacts.

In the beginning, before they were given the B.C. Buildings Corporation-owned house in Fairfield, the facility shared a building with feminist action groups and the staff had an aggressive militant stance.

As a result it acquired a negative reputation with male professional people such as doctors, and lawyers and police.

Today men are only allowed to visit the house by appointment, but no longer considered the enemy. The attitude of staff has mellowed considerably.

Nonetheless, recent government funding cutbacks don't make the going any easier.

Transition House survives on a federal secretary of state grant of $13 per bed a day.

All expenses, including food and salaries for the three full-time people are drawn from the grant. Three temporary staff for public relations and child care work have been hired on summer employment grants.

Women are encouraged to stick to their usual daily schedule. The staff arrives at 9:30 a.m. and leave at 10:30 p.m., but during the rest of the time the residents are on their own.

A weekly meeting is held to allocate chores such as grocery shopping and for airing grievences and just talking. It's not uncommon for these sessions to last until 4 in the morning.

Living in close quarters with a group of strange women and their children, who are suffering emotionally and physically, is no easy task and staff members find themselves refereeing the odd blow-up.

After an intitial screening interview — women on drugs or suffering severe alcohol or mental problems are referred to other agencies — the guest is admitted and left alone for the first couple of days.

She is invited to consider the house her home for a month, sometimes longer, depending on her situation. During that time she receives counselling if she wants it, and the solace of others who are in the same situation.

Man held after third robbery

A 22-year-old man was arrested early today after the city's third robbery this week.

City detectives said a man walking on Douglas near Francis was accosted about 4 a.m. and forced to give up his watch and $40 cash.

The property was recovered, police said.

On the previous night three people in a car at Beacon Hill lookout were confronted by a man with a knife who took two wristwatches and fled into the bush.

Three young men were arrested after a pedestrian was robbed of $65 on Douglas two nights ago.

Gardom asked to intervene in centre fight

Attorney-General Garde Gardom has been asked to intervene in the Tillicum shopping centre dispute between the Capital Regional Board and Saanich.

The request came Wednesday from Victoria MLA Charles Barber, the NDP's municipal affairs critic.

Barber asked Gardom to have the dispute handled under the Constitutional Questions Determination Act.

He said the act provides a way to settle the dispute quickly and at far less cost.

Under the act the cabinet can refer the dispute to the court of appeal or a judge.

"Such a quarrel undermines morale and co-operation on other fronts," said Barber. "It diverts staff time. It destabilizes working relationships among local governments in Greater Victoria. It does no good thing for anyone."

Gardom is in Vancouver and has not yet seen Barber's letter but a ministry spokesman said the letter has been referred to the ministry's constitutional staff for comment.

At a regional plan management committee meeting Wednesday, Metchosin director Mac Tipton said being "nice guys" at the Capital Regional District level isn't going to solve the shopping centre hassle.

"Going on the old boy system isn't going to solve anything," he said.

"The question is does the regional district have the power or not to approve or disapprove regional shopping centres?

"We had the old boy system and Saanich chose to ignore it," he said, adding that Saanich and other communities planning such centres as Tillicum must get board approval.

Tipton was responding to Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier, who said: "Regional government will only succeed to the extent that goodwill and spirit of co-operation exists between the member municipalities."

Couvelier told the committee the board did not have the authority under the Municipal Act to veto shopping centre applications.

He said the regional plan must be amended so that member municipalities have the power to enforce regional shopping centre regulations.

Committee chairman Jim Campbell noted that a letter from Saanich solicitor Chris Nation indicated a desire by the municipality to retain control over shopping centres.

The letter, referring to recommended amendments to the regional plan which Nation said he considered legally unsound, continued: "Firstly, the section appears to once again give the regional board the power to approve individual applications for new regional centres. The existing regional plan does the same thing, although in more explicit terms, and it has always been our contention that the board does not have the power to do so."

"That certainly is what it was intended to do," Campbell said.

Couvelier clashed with Campbell after the latter said the mayor appeared to believe the regional board should not have the power to screen shopping centre applications.

Couvelier said he did not say should not.

"I said you don't have it," he told Campbell.

The committee finally agreed the regional planning department should draw up in bylaw form definitions of shopping centres contained in a joint-agreement between Saanich and regional planners.

The Tillicum developers, Cal Investments Ltd. and Tillicum Holdings Ltd., brought a motion in chambers today, asking that they be included as defendants with Saanich in the suit the CRD is bringing against the municipality.

Ask the Times

Q. I would like to know how voting in elections works in Canada. How many votes are necessary to elect a candidate. Are more votes necessary for a candidate running in densely populated areas? G.V.E.

A. The candidate with the most votes wins whether the area is rural or urban. If there are three candidates running in one riding, and one has one vote more than the others, he wins.

Q. Where is the Somerset mountain range on Vancouver Island? E.N.

A. Roughly between Bamfield and the Klanawa River on the west coast.

Boost cuts chiropractor visits

The provincial health ministry has increased chiropractic fees at the expense of patients.

And chiropractors are not happy with the government policy.

They confirmed today the fee for treatments has been boosted but the total allowance for patient visits under the B.C. Medical Plan remains the same.

The fee per visit has gone up from $7.20 to $7.75 but the $75 a year allowance to patients under 65 has not increased.

This means that instead of receiving 10 treatments a year, these patients will get only about eight.

The allowance for patients over 65 stays at $100 and they will receive about 10 treatements a year instead of 12.

"It doesn't cost the government a cent," said Charles Kibble of Vancouver, a director of the B.C. Chiropractors Association.

"The trouble is as the fee is increased year after year, it reduces the number of free visits. This is the way this governnment operates."

He said the asociation is still negotiating with the B.C. Medical Association and the health ministry.

One patient, Fellows Hewett of Victoria, said the free treatments are keeping people from taking up hospital beds.

"When you think it cost about $150 a day to keep a person in hospital, the free treatments are worthwhile," he said.

Fellows said the reduced treatments will also work hardships on pensioners and people on fixed incomes.

Chiropractor Bruce Russell agreed treatments keep people out of hospital.

"Our medical plan needs an overhauling," he said.

Chiropractor R.G. Boak said chiropractors were informed of the fee increase a few days ago.

"I haven't yet worked out all the implications," he said.

"For example new patients under 65 will get even less treatments as there is a fee for consultation and this comes out of the allowance."

'Had to be on toes to work with Dief'

Two Victorians who once served in John Diefenbaker's cabinet had words of praise today for The Chief.

Maj.-Gen. George Pearkes, 1268 Tattersal, said Diefenbaker was a great Conservative and a great Canadian.

He also did a lot for Western Canada, said Pearkes, 91, who served as federal defence minister from 1957 to 1960.

"Diefenbaker was a great Conservative and he did a lot for his country," said the former B.C. lieutenant-governor.

Gordon Churchill, who held several cabinet posts from 1957 to 1963, said Diefenbaker was one of the great men in Canada's political history.

"It was quite a privilege to know and work with him," said Churchill, who lives at 202-140 Douglas.

"He was a very keen-minded, intelligent person.

"It was stimulating to work with him because you had to be on your toes."

Churchill, 80, said the quality he admired most in Diefenbaker was his courage in the face of adversity.

"I was with him on so many occasions when things weren't going well. But he never gave up."

Diefenbaker also had a wonderful sense of humor which stood him in good stead when times got tough, he said.

Churchill was appointed minister of trade and commerce in June, 1957, minister of veteran affairs in 1960 and then served as minister of national defence from February to April, 1963.

He said he spent three days with Diefenbaker at his home in Prince Albert, Sask. in May of this year during the time of the federal election.

"He and I had a thousand laughs," Churchill said.

Diefenbaker had a common touch, he said, and was just as comfortable talking on the street corners with people in his hometown as he was at some grand, state function.

Diefenbaker's death leaves "a great gap in the life of the country but he left a remarkable record of achievement that will stand for all time.

"He was a remarkable man. I'll miss him."

Today's Markets

Toronto

The Toronto stock market rose sharply in active mid-afternoon trading today.

A trading halt continued from Wednesday in shares of Home Oil Ltd., Cygnus Corp. Ltd. and Consumers Gas Co., which controls the former two companies.

Consumers Gas said it might begin talks on a possible amalgamation of Home Oil and Cygnus Corp. Further news is expected.

Consumers Gas last traded at $23¼, Home Oil A at $66½, Home Oil B at $67, Cygnus Corp. A at $17 and Cygnus B at $17.

Trading in shares of Scurry-Rainbow Oil Ltd., which is majority owned by Home Oil, was also halted Wednesday but resumed at mid-morning Thursday. The company said it is not affected by the proposed merger talks. There were no sales by 2 p.m. of the stock, which last traded at $41.

Trading in shares of Canadian Realty Investment Units resumed shortly after the opening following a halt Wednesday. The units were unchanged at $8¼ by 2 p.m.

Vancouver

Prices were up in another session of heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange with a volume of 3,118,880 shares in the first four hours.

In the industrials, British Columbia Resources Investment Corp. was unchanged at $6.20 on 92,100 shares and Canadian Javelin was unchanged at $1.30 on 5,100. Taro was unchanged at $3.35 on 3,200 and Cominco was unchanged at $45 3-4 on 2,000. Westcoast Petroleum was unchanged at $22 3-4 and Renn was up .03 at $1.20.

Redford Mines was up .17 at $2.07 on 187,500 shares on the resource and development board, while SNA was up .03 at .45 on 113,200. Rhodes was up .40 at $2.80 on 106,000 and Jet-Star was up .25 at $3.25 on 99,200. Consolidated Trans Columbia was down .01 1-2 at .30 and Pacific was down .05 at .23.

New York

Stock prices rose moderately in heavy trading today extending the market's broad rally in the previous session.

Analysts say heavy institutional buying is behind the surge in the market in recent sessions.

London

The London stock market rose sharply near the close of light trading today.

The Financial Times index was up 5.8 to 480.0.

Canadian shares eased.

Business briefs

Royal predicting modest growth

MONTREAL (CP) — Canada's economy will grow three per cent this year and four per cent in 1980, Royal Bank economists predict in the latest issue of Econoscope.

Growth will be held back by world oil problems, but "we still think that the Canadian economy is moving cautiously out of a long period of stagflation toward more balanced growth in 1980," says the monthly report.

But it warned that growth might be weaker if business inventories continue to pile up, and it said the Canadian economy is beset by a high current account deficit and inflation, although only West Germany and Japan have lower inflation rates.

Short-term interest rates will decline only marginally between now and the mid-1980s, and long-term rates may actually rise because of high U.S. rates provoked by uncertain energy policy and a weak U.S. dollar.

Rapid growth in Canada's money supply and a high federal deficit are other factors.

Econoscope says any chance for the U.S. to avoid a recession has vanished because of oil price rises and high inflation. Contraction of the U.S. economy that began in the second quarter of 1979 will continue in the third quarter, but there will be a small upturn after that.

Iran to get $30.2M refund

NEW YORK (AP) — A U.S. federal court of appeals has upheld the Iranian government's claim for a $30.2-million refund from American Bell International.

The 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals voted not to grant Bell's request for a stay.

American Bell, an American Telephone and Telegraph subsidiary based in South Plainfield, N.J., signed contracts totalling $280 million last year to build an extensive communications network. The contract was with the shah of Iran, who was subsequently deposed.

Iran made a $38.8-million down payment that could be recalled on demand from Manufacturers Hanover Trust Co.

That privilege was excercised in June by the revolutionary government, which subtracted $8.6 million for work already done.

Beware of gadget pushers

TORONTO (CP) — Small businesses should be wary of salesmen pushing electronic gadgetry for the so-called office of the future, a Boston management consultant said today.

John Quick told a group of businessmen that absurd arguments are being used to sell the latest fads in office equipment.

Many expensive components of the promised paperless office may eventually collect dust in storage closets, he said.

Quick said those gadgets may join some of the unused remains of revolutions heralded in earlier years — audio-visual equipment, multi-media presentations, industrial television and computer-assisted teaching.

"The office of the future will have fewer people and less equipment rather than more."

Mutuals

TORONTO (CP)—Recent prices of investment funds supplied by The Investment Funds Institute of Canada Wednesday. They are the net asset value per share or unit (NAVPS) last circulated by the fund in accordance with its pricing practice as contained in the prospectus of the fund. n—no sales charge, x—U.S. Fund, y—delayed NAVPS, xd—ex-dividend.

Bonds

TORONTO (CP) — Prices were steady in light trading on the Canadian bond market Wednesday. The short, long and mid terms ends of the market were unchanged. Provincial and corporate issues also remained the same. Day-to-day money was available at 12½ per cent.

Silver

Wednesday

Closing basic price of 1,000-ounce certificates in the Victoria area, according to the Scotiabank, $9.13 U.S. bid per troy ounce and $9.17 asked. Previous day $9.10 and $9.14.

Chase bumps prime

NEW YORK (Reuter) — Chase Manhattan Bank raised its prime interest rate Wednesday by one quarter point to 12 per cent, matching the all-time high set in July, 1974.

The move by Chase, third-largest bank in the U.S., comes at a time when the Carter administration is applying a policy of monetary restraint to cope with worsening inflation.

Most other major banks in the U.S. currently have their prime rate at 11¾ per cent. However, most were expected to follow Chase Manhattan's lead.

U.S. riled by fares

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian government Wednesday received a formal note of dissatisfaction from the U.S. Civil Aeronautics Board about Air Canada's proposed fall seat sale on some cross-border flights.

A spokesman for the Canadian transport commission said, however, the note does not threaten to suspend or disallow the seat sale.

Peter Schnobb said the government has 15 days to respond to the note, but he declined to comment on what Canada's response might be.

A similar situation arose earlier this year when the U.S. threatened to block Air Canada's spring seat sale.

Davis, Lougheed clash over Alberta oil wealth

By PETER HADEKEL
FP News Service

LA MALBAIE, QUEBEC — Ontario and Alberta clashed on the issue of oil revenues Wednesday as the 20th annual conference of provincial premiers opened in an atmosphere of confrontation.

Alberta Premier Peter Lougheed angrily rejected the suggestion of Ontario's William Davis that Alberta share its mounting oil wealth with the consuming provinces.

Lougheed called the Davis proposal made public earlier this week, "completely unacceptable." He said, it was "a clear attempt to change the basic concept and arrangements of confederation which left the ownership of natural resources to the provinces."

Davis had suggested that Alberta, with more than $5 billion in oil revenues amassed in its Heritage Fund, should share oil revenues with the other provinces to promote industrial development and ease hardships on the consumer.

But Lougheed countered that Alberta has already subsidized the Canadian economy to the tune of $15 billion since 1974 by agreeing to keep the domestic price of oil below world levels.

"That subsidy is three times the size of the Heritage Fund," Lougheed said.

"Since 1974 and currently the Ontario manufacturing and industrial complex has enjoyed the lowest crude oil costs of any major industrialized centre in the world."

The domestic price of oil now is $13.75 a barrel, while OPEC countries charge between $20 and $27 a barrel.

The domestic price is scheduled to rise another dollar next Jan. 1, but Lougheed said he considers the increase "insufficient."

He did not say what price Alberta wants but said he favors a gradual phasing-in of price increases to world levels.

Lougheed got support from an unexpected source Wednesday. Richard Hatfield, premier of New Brunswick, said he disagrees with the Ontario position because it undermines the principle that natural resources belong to the provinces.

Hatfield remarked caustically that Canada's economic problems would not be solved "by edicts from Queen's Park."

"The people of Ontario are going to have to trust the generosity and the responsibility of the people of Alberta," Hatfield added.

Lougheed-Davis confrontation ensures that energy will be the main topic of discussion as premiers begin working sessions today at a resort hotel 140 kilometres northeast of Quebec City.

Also on the agenda for the two-day meeting being chaired by Quebec's Rene Levesque are the economy, consititutional issues and medicare.

The senior Quebec officials said constitutional discussions are unlikely to involve the parti Quebecois government's option of sovereignty-association between Quebec and Canada.

The fact that seven of the ten premiers are of the same Conservative stripe as the Clark government also makes it unlikely the provinces will attack Ottawa's inaction on the constitution as much as they did when the Trudeau's Liberals were in power.

Tank flaw brings recall of 20,000 Austins

OTTAWA (CP) — The transport department Wednesday announced the recall of 20,000 Austin Marinas manufactured from 1972 to 1978 because of potentially leaky gas tanks in the imported cars.

All owners of the cars manufactured in Great Britain by Jaguar, Rover, Triumph Inc., formerly known as British Leyland, have been asked to notify local dealers.

Jim Bancroft, chief motor vehicle investigator for the department, said a two-year investigation of the cars followed complaints of corrosion on the tops of gas tanks.

Stevens' aim is pre-70 level

OTTAWA (CP) — In 1970, shortly after Pierre Trudeau became prime minister, there were 86 Canadians for every federal government employee. Today there are 72.

Treasury Board President Sinclair Stevens told reporters Wednesday the goal of his four-year government reduction program is to get the ratio back to its pre-Trudeau levels.

Since the beginning of the decade the population has increased by about 10 per cent whereas the number of persons working for the federal government increased by 31 per cent to 325,120. By 1983, Stevens plans to get the public service back down to 273,000.

He is convinced the public will not suffer and that the resulting federal work force should be more efficient and streamlined.

In fact, Stevens says, the numerical reduction in government manpower is little more than a side benefit of his party's commitment to get the government out of many activities that can be better handled by the private sector.

Stevens thinks government employees and their unions will be reasonable in accepting his objectives once they understand the purpose of the cuts.

He said the manufacturing sector provides the government with a valuable model. Although it employs fewer people than it did a decade ago, it is more productive. One reason is the efficient use of computers and other manpower-saving devices.

Stevens acknowledges that there are differences between manufacturing — where the objective is to increase output — and the government, which aims to provide the public with certain essential services. But he believes nonetheless that it will be useful for the government to imitate the private sector.

Two Chans might meet in net final

By MAX LOW
Times Staff

Brothers Lorne and Kerry Chan are on a collision course in the sixth annual Victoria Times Public Parks Tennis tournament's main event.

With a starting field of 118 players (there were 255 entries over all in the tourney), the men's singles is the biggest tennis contest on the Island. And, when the final is played at Oak Bay's Henderson Park courts on Sunday afternoon, the Chans could find themselves on opposite sides of the net.

That would be the first time relatives have clashed in a final in the six-year history of the Times tourney. First, though, both must get past some pretty tough opponents when the semi-finals of all five events are held on the same courts starting at noon on Saturday.

Finals will begin at noon Sunday and there's lots of space for spectators who are welcome to come and watch the finest of Greater Victoria's public parks players in action.

Ted Smythe, president of the Vancouver Island Tennis Association (VITA), which with the Times has been cosponsor since the tourney's inception, will referee the finals.

Immediately afterward, Times publisher Colin McCullough will present trophies to the champions and runners-up and Ken Holman, owner of Centre Court Racquets in the Stadacona Centre on Pandora, will hand a bonus prize of a new racquet to each event winner.

We've already featured Kerry Chan in our photographic parade as he's also in the semi-finals of the junior boys' singles.

Elder brother Lorne Chan is a 21-year-old Esquimalt Parks and Recreation Department summer employee and a student of geography, social sciences and physical education at the University of Victoria. This is his third and most successful summer in the Times tourney, having reached the quarter-finals of the men's singles last year.

Lorne ended young Rick Folk's hopes of winning three titles by ousting him, 9-6, and he'll play Larry Mais in the semis Saturday.

Mais, 28, was a child care worker with the handicapped for many years and has recently gone into investment consulting. After toppling top seed Perry Evans, he eliminated Kent Campbell, 7-5, 6-0.

In the other half of the men's draw, Kerry Chan, who downed John Zanic, 9-6, will face Robert Exell, a 6-2, 6-3 winner over junior Glenn Johnston.

Exell, a 19-year-old currently performing the acrobatic feat of living in Victoria and commuting to work in Vancouver, is a lefthander with classic strokes who doesn't belong to a club but takes private lessons from Australian pro Ian Brady, formerly with the now-defunct Island Indoor Tennis and now at the Lions Gate Club in West Vancouver.

Kerry Chan's other semi-final is against Neil Johnston in the boys' singles. Neil, who at 16 is Glenn's younger brother, is a Grade 11 student at Reynolds High School who is making his third appearance in the Times tourney.

In the other semi-final it will be Rick Folk versus Henry Ducluzeau.

Rick still has a shot at two titles as he and partner Angela Kolic play Eric Dyke and Cindy Bray in the last of the mixed doubles quarter-final matches tonight and the winning team earns the right to meet Jay Wilson and Cory Aspden in Saturday's semis. Don and Peggy Howes play Larry Christiansen and Sue Moilliet in the other side of the draw.

In Saturday's other semi-final matchups, it's Janine Prince versus Carol Lauzon and Angela Kolic against Joan Thomas in the girls' singles while in the women's event it's Carolyn Jones versus Peggy Howes and Noreen Walmsley against Charlayne Joe.

Dutch side shows top-ranked power

It looks like the Netherlands could be a tough foe for Canada in the first round of the world women's field hockey championships starting Saturday at Vancouver's Thunderbird Park.

Netherlands, top-ranked in the world, blanked the No. 3 team, New Zealand, 4-0 Wednesday before approximately 350 fans at the University of Victoria.

New Zealand came close to connecting in the first half but the sides were still locked in a scoreless tie at half time.

Margriet Bieijer scored three of the goals for Netherlands and Sophie von Weiler added the single as New Zealand displayed a tendancy to hang on to the ball a little too long.

Four and possibly five players from the Vancouver Island Women's Field Hockey Association will be playing for the Canadian national team.

Dianne Whittingham and Shelley Winter, both 26 and school teachers in the Greater Victoria area, have had the most experience in international competition.

Whittingham, a forward who first joined the Canadian team in 1972, plays for Sandpipers while Winter, who plays defence, joined the national squad in 1975 and is a regular on the Oak Bay Ladies side.

The other players starting for Canada are Jan Crook of Victoria and Lynne Beecroft of Duncan, who are both 22 and play defence for the University of Victoria.

Crook joined the national squad in '75 and Beecroft has been with the team since '77.

Mairi-Anne Longmore of the Mariners, 23, who joined the nationals in 1976, has been named as a reserve in the world tourney.

Canada's star appears to be rising in international competition.

During 1975, Canada was ranked 15th in the world. Heading into this tourney, it is ninth.

In addition to the world title, they'll also be gunning for a little extra.

The top five teams in the tournament qualify for the 1980 Olympic Games in Moscow.

McEnroe penalized for brattish wiggle

TORONTO (CP) — John McEnroe is having a tough time toning down his reputation as a tennis brat.

The 20-year-old American found himself in hot water with the umpire in a second-round match at the Canadian Open tennis championships Wednesday, a match he eventually won 7-5, 6-3 over Jan Kodes of Czechoslovakia.

With McEnroe leading 5-2 and Kodes serving at 40-30, the umpire assessed McEnroe a penalty point because in the official's estimation, the American player wiggled his posterior in the direction of the chair when a controversial line call didn't go his way.

McEnroe, who held service in the next game to clinch the match, didn't see it that way.

"I don't think the penalty point was called for," McEnroe said. "I just turned around and he thought I was trying to be suggestive. I'm sure if it had been anybody else he wouldn't have called it."

McEnroe took a pasting from the British press at Wimbledon for his on-court antics. He believes his problems started at the Queen's tournament in Britain prior to Wimbledon when he received two penalty points.

"Both of them were judgment calls," McEnroe said. "In one case, the umpire called me for not starting the match on time. I don't think that was justified either."

Regardless of his antics, the second-seeded McEnroe played near-flawless tennis on a cold, blustery day at the York University Tennis Centre.

Advancing along with McEnroe to the third round was top-seeded Bjorn Borg of Sweden, who had little difficulty beating Ivan Molina of Colombia 6-0, 6-3.

The women's draw lost its top seed when Evonne Goolagong-Cawley of Australia had to withdraw because of recurring back problem. She re-injured her lower back at the U.S. clay-court championships last week in Indianapolis, where she lost the final to Chris Evert Lloyd, and aggravated it in a first-round victory here over Brenda Perry of New Zealand.

The loss of Goolagong-Cawley leaves seventh-seeded Pam Teeguarden of the U.S. as the only seeded woman. Teeguarden beat Diane Evers of Australia, 6-3, 7-6.

Irish advance to final again

By ERNIE FEDORUK
Times Staff

Kevin Alexander continues to file objections about the attention not showered on his Victoria Shamrock teammates.

Trouble is, the way Alexander behaves on the lacrosse floor, obliging the young man can be a difficult thing at times.

Consider Wednesday's spine-tingling 17-16 victory over New Westminster Salmonbellies, which pushed the Shamrocks into the Western Lacrosse Association final for a third straight year.

After the chore was done in Memorial Arena, before about 1,500 fans, Alexander felt the main reason the Irish swept Westminster aside 4-1 in the best-of-seven semi-final series was the fact the Salmonbellies "didn't show much respect for the others" in the Shamrock lineup.

The talents are deep, Kevin figures, and the disrespect is bound to hurt rivals "when we work together."

But while he would like to spread the praise around, Alexander makes things difficult with his scoring antics. Wednesday, he blasted home seven goals, including the game's last two, which brought the Shamrocks from a 16-15 deficit with less than four minutes remaining.

The seven goals were one short of the modern playoff record for a single game.

Alexander also drew one assist.

Jim Lynch scored three times, Larry Bell and Steve Buckley each added a pair while Victoria's singles went to Bob Cool, Jim Boyd and rookie Rhys Wickes.

Veteran Wayne Goss sparked Westminster's gallant, last-ditch attempt to prolong the series by scoring three and setting up four. Bob Tasker also scored three times while Ivan Tuura and Gilles Bezeau each clicked for a pair. The singles went to Len Cimminelli, Brian Tasker, Norm Leuszler, Jack Fulton, Ken Sim and Brad Parker.

Despite starting with an ailing goaltender, the Shamrocks were off an running. They jumped away to a 7-2 lead in the first period and were on top 10-6 when Victoria switched the ailing one for a healthy one.

Starter Larry Smeltzer, a series standout, was suffering from the flu. He became sick between the first and second period, gave it a try but found himself getting dizzy.

Scott Marshall came on, but health didn't work to Victoria's advantage. Salmonbellies scored on their first shot at Marshall, then kept hammering away to climb to within one goal several times before assuming the lead for the only time in the game late in the third period.

It didn't last. Marshall, atoning for a generally shaky performance, put Alexander into the clear with a neat pass and Kevin scored easily to make it 16-16. Moments later Alexander came through with the winner and the Shamrocks played out the last 53 seconds without yielding another goal.

Marshall did seem to be caught flat-footed on some of the New Westminster goals but, to his credit, he did make some important saves, especially in the final eight-minute stretch.

And in his defence, Victoria's support wasn't quite as strong as it could have been. Shamrock checkers continually allowed Salmonbellies to get away some good shots when closing attention might have prevented them.

Last year's national finalists, Shamrocks now will face either Vancouver Burrards or Coquitlam Adanacs in a best-of-seven final scheduled to get under way in Memorial Arena on Monday.

Burrards took a 3-2 lead in the other series by upsetting Adanacs 20-13 in Coquitlam.

The sixth game is scheduled Friday and the seventh, if necessary, will be played in Coquitlam on Saturday.

Stampeders put an end to B.C. run

Times News Services

Richard Crump's determined running set up two Calgary touchdowns in the second half to give the Stampeders a 22-10 Canadian Football League victory over British Columbia Lions on Wednesday night.

The loss was B.C.'s first in six games but they remained in first place with nine points. Calgary moved into a second-place tie with Edmonton Eskimos, both with eight points.

The game, played before a record Calgary of 34,825 at McMahon Stadium, was basically a dull contest, dominated by strong defences, inept offences and many penalty flags.

In the only other game, Saskatchewan Roughriders suffered their fifth straight loss in a 21-12 decision against Toronto Argonauts.

Lui Passaglia kicked field goals of 24, 19 and 42 yards to give Lions a 9-0 lead by 9:24 of the second quarter. Calgary came back with a touchdown by Willie Burden and a convert and single by J. T. Hay to make it 9-8 at the half.

Following Passaglia's 54-yard single in the third quarter, Calgary won the game with Crump's three-yard touchdown run at 13:08 of the quarter and Willie Armstead's 28-yard touchdown reception at 4:17 of the final quarter. Hay converted both.

The first capacity crowd at stadium since it was expanded prior to the season had little to get excited about except for the brief Calgary offensive thrust in the second half that led to the touchdowns.

Crump got Calgary's go-ahead touchdown after Terry Irwin had intercepted the first pass thrown by B.C.'s second quarterback, Carlos Brown. That gave Calgary the ball at the B.C. 17-yard line and two plays later, Crump ran into the end zone.

Armstead was all alone to catch the 28-yard pass from quarterback Ken Johnson in the final quarter but it was Crump who made the touchdown play possible. On a third-and-one gamble, Crump was hit four yards behind the line of scrimmage but he broke Joe Fourqurean's tackle and fought his way to the first down. Three plays later, Armstead scored to give Calgary its 22-10 lead.

The Lions never managed to threaten after that.

While the offences lacked any punch and the defences had a field day, it was the officials who dominated much of the game. More than 30 penalties were called, including five consecutive holding penalties late in the first quarter.

The play of the defence was demonstrated by seven quarterback sacks by Calgary and four by B.C. There were also six fumbles, four by the Stampeders.

Crump was the leading rusher with 41 yards on 14 carries. Burden had five receptions for 55 yards and Tom Forzani four for 65 yards. For the Lions, Larry Key carried nine times for 29 yards and caught three passes for 27 yards.

"It's a nice win for the Argos; it's just another disappointing loss for us," said Lancaster, suffering through his first season as coach of the Roughriders after 16 years as the team's star quarterback.

"We're 0-5 and really not showing signs that we're going anywhere."

Thompson advances

Defending-champion Bill Thompson of the host club, who has won five of the last nine titles, advanced to the semi-finals of the 57th annual Seniors' North West Golf Association tournament at Victoria Golf Club with an easy victory Wednesday.

Thompson, who topped Herb Griswold of Portland 5 and 3, was scheduled to meet 1977 winner Erv Parent of Seattle in one of the semis earlier today.

Parent advanced with a 3 and 2 decision over Arnold Groth of Seattle.

In other quarter-final tussles, medallist Bill McColl of Victoria defeated clubmate Ray Cranston 7 and 6 while Keith Welts of Seattle ousted Max Hunter of Tacoma, 1-up.

The final is scheduled for Friday.

Pirates eyeing Series

By Associated Press

Pittsburgh Pirates — now there's a team that appreciates being in first place.

Pirates, who used to make it a habit winning the National League East title, went more than two years before gaining the division's top spot on July 28 this season.

They only stayed there a day, but moved in again on Aug. 5. And now they may never leave.

"I think the World Series is well within our grasp," said Bill Robinson, who belted a home run as the Pirates beat San Diego Padres 5-1 Wednesday night.

Robinson, of course, is one of the main reasons that the Pirates are doing so well these days, even if he isn't playing as much as last year because of the acquisition of John Milner. Robinson's home run was his 23rd, pretty good for a part-timer.

"You put personal feelings aside when you play on a championshsip team," said Robinson, talking about his part-time status. "You just go out and blood-and-guts it and play the best you can.

"And at the end of the year, they give the cheques to everybody. They don't say, 'You only played half a season.' "

In other National League action, Montreal Expos blanked Houston Astros 3-0, Philadelphia Phillies stopped Cincinnati Reds 3-2, Chicago Cubs edged San Francisco Giants 6-5, Los Angeles Dodgers defeated St. Louis Cardinals 6-5 and New York Mets downed Atlanta Braves, 6-3.

In the American League, Eddie Murray stole home with two out in the bottom of the 12th inning to give Baltimore Orioles a 2-1 vicotory over Chicago White Sox, Boston Red Sox beat Minnesota Twins 9-5, New York Yankees topped Texas Rangers 4-3, Milwaukee Brewers trimmed the Kansas City Royals 6-5, Detroit Tigers bested California Angels 6-1, Seattle Mariners edged Cleveland Indians 3-2 and Oakland A's defeated Toronto Blue Jays, 3-1.

B.C pulls ahead in easy fashion

SASKATOON (CP) — British Columbia, as befits a province with the Pacific Ocean on its doorstep, excelled in the water to pull comfortably ahead in the struggle for gold medals as the Western Canada Summer Games reached the half-way point Wednesday.

B.C. produced 31 golds in the first three days of the Games, catering to Western Canadian athletes with international potential, to fashion a comfortable margin over Alberta, which stuck to the ground for the bulk of its 19 golds. Manitoba had 13 gold medals and Saskatchewan a meagre three.

B.C. gold consisted of 17 in track and field, six in diving, four in canoeing, two in fencing, one in field hockey and one in water polo. Alberta had 17 golds in track and field, one in canoeing and one in men's team handball.

Rick Watts' 17 points was a decisive factor in Manitoba's 69-67 gold-medal victory over Saskatchewan in men's basketball.

Debbie Smith of Regina struck for 17 points to help Saskatchewan fashion a 79-66 victory over B.C. for the women's basketball gold. Bev Bland of White Rock had 17 points for B.C.

In water polo, two goals by Gord Vantol of Burnaby were good enough for a 5-4 gold-medal victory by B.C. over Alberta.

B.C. took five of 12 gold medals in the final day of track and field competition, with Peter Spir of Vancouver triumphant in the men's 1,500 metres, Lloyd Guss of Vancouver in the men's 400 metres, Dean Bauck of Vancouver in the men's high jump, Zenon Smiechowski of Coquitlam in the men's decathlon and Anne Mackie-Morelli of Port Coquitlam and the Victoria trio of Cheryl Noble, Judy Tobacco and Debbie Campbell in the women's 4x400 relay.

Other Victorians making a good showing were Bruce Shaw, who finished seventh in the marathon, and Derrick Donaldson, seventh in the 100 metres.

Winners in Games events get gold medals known as Awards of Excellence. All other competitors get a silver medal known as an Award of Achievement to recognize their participation in Games events.

Alberta took the team title in track and field with 875 points. B.C. had 824, Saskatchewan 569 and Manitoba 526.

Competition was completed Wednesday in basketball, diving, fencing, field hockey, team handball, water polo, track and field and men's volleyball. Today marks the beginning of activities in archery, gymnastics, swimming, the modern pentathlon and soccer. Boxing, cycling, equestrian, judo, rowing, weightlifting, wrestling and shooting get under way Friday.

Vancouver's David Pope and Tracey Janes won the men's tower and women's three-metre events Wednesday to give B.C. a clean sweep of the Games' six diving gold medals. Janes had earlier won the women's tower and one-metre events. B.C. captured the team title in diving with 114 points to Manitoba's 61. Alberta had 45 points and Saskatchewan 14.

Michele and Lesley Williams, twin sisters from Victoria now attending the University of British Columbia, combined for a total of six goals that helped B.C. win the gold medal in field hockey. B.C. wrapped up the gold Wednesday with a 2-1 decision over Manitoba and a 2-0 win over Alberta, emerging from a double round-robin competition with a 5-1 record.

B.C. swashbuckled its way to two fencing gold medals Wednesday, matching Manitoba's gold production in the blade event. Ho Quan, Graham Smith and Tom Wollner of Vancouver took the men's team epee for B.C., which earlier got the women's foil title from Elizabeth Milton, Frances Sloan and Bonny Vantol of Vancouver.

Firefighters bounce back

LIBBY, Mont. — Victoria Firefighters have come back through the back door to reach the final of the Western regional Senior Babe Ruth baseball tournament.

Firefighters defeated Washington 8-6 Wednesday in a losers' bracket game to gain a berth in the final against Oregon in the double-loss elimination tournament. Oregon defeated Firefighters 4-1 in the series' opening game.

Ron Ekstrom pitched the victory while Russ Mosher led the offence with two hits to drive in three runs.

Cosmos also win

HERMISTON, Ore. — Dean Purych tagged a perfect sqeeze bunt in the final inning Wednesday to give Gordon Head Cosmopolitan at 6-5 win over host Hermiston in the opening round of the Pacific Northwest Babe Ruth (13-year-olds) baseball championship tournament.

Mark Stein pitched the victory as the Victoria club came up with an eight-hit attack.

The team plays again tonight.

Mussels stung by late triple

BELLINGHAM — Ramon Estepa's triple drove home the winning run in the eighth inning Wednesday to spark Bellingham Mariners to a 5-3 Northwest Baseball League victory over Victoria Mussels.

It was only the third loss in Victoria's last 11 games.

Bellingham's Chris Henry beat out an infield roller with two out in the eighth before Estepa's three-base hit. Estepa then raced home on an infield error on the next play for an insurance run.

Kevin King led off the Mariners' fourth with his sixth homer of the season.

Mark Cahill went the distance and pitched a nine-hitter to improve his record to 5-4 while Stephen Hartery took the loss.

Mussels and Mariners open a three-game series tonight at 7:30 in Victoria's Royal Athletic Park.

Stockers retain women's crown

Lisa Atkinson doubled and scored the winning run as defending champion Stockers North Americans blanked Bemister's Welding 5-0 Wednesday at Hyacinth Park to sweep the best-of-three Victoria Senior Women's Softball League playoff final.

Debbie Derkson struck out four batters and walked only one while pitching the four-hit victory.

Laurie Grimston led Stocker batters with three hits.

At Central Park, Labatts upset K&R Sooke 5-4 in a Stuffy McGinnis Men's League consolation round-robin game.

Pete Devana relieved starter Jack Lundquist in the second inning and received credit for the pitching victory. Mike Lee belted a home run for Sooke.

In the opening game of the Heywood Men's League semi-final series, Brentwood Merchants and Victoria Athletics battled to a 6-6 tie in nine innings at Heywood Avenue Park.

The second game of the best-of-five affair is scheduled for 6:30 p.m. Tuesday and the other semi between Mears Realty and Capital Builders opens tonight at the same time.

At Macdonald Park, Birch Builders trounced Strathcona Stingers 11-1 to take a 2-1 lead in the Macdonald Men's League final. Ben Szumac hit two homers and drove in seven runs to spark the Birch attack.

Alberta hosts 1983 Games

EDMONTON (CP) — Alberta will act as host of the 1983 Western Canada Summer Games and will invite the Yukon and Northwest Territories to compete for the first time, recreation minister Peter Trynchy has announced.

Calgary is the only city so far to have made a bid on the games.

The games are expected to attract some 2,000 athletes to compete in 23 summer Olympic sports.

Multi-year contract for Hanlon

VANCOUVER (CP) — Goaltender Glen Hanlon, out of action for almost three months last season because of a knee injury, has signed a multi-year contract with Vancouver Canucks.

Hanlon, 22, appeared in 31 National Hockey League games in 1978-79 before suffering torn knee ligaments Jan. 27 at Denver in a game against Colorado Rockies. He missed the rest of the season, but didn't undergo surgery.

The 22-year-old native of Brandon had a goals-against average of 3.10 with three shutouts before his injury, suffered when a Colorado player fell on his outstretched leg.

Top time of year

STUTTGART, West Germany (AP) — Harald Schmid won the men's 400-metre run in 44.91 seconds — the world's fastest time this year — at the West German track and field championships.

Whitecaps triumph 3-2 on goal by Lewington

Times News Services

Vancouver Whitecaps shrugged off hot weather in Dallas Wednesday to defeat Dallas Tornado 3-2 in a first-round playoff game for the North American Soccer League championship.

Dallas has a second chance when it meets the Whitecaps in Vancouver's Empire Stadium Saturday.

If the Tornado wins that game, a 30-minute, mini-game will follow to decide the series winner.

Buzz Parsons opened the scoring for Vancouver at 16:38 off a corner kick by Alan Ball and an assist from Willie Johnston. At 36:03, Kevin Hector scored again for the Whitecaps with assists from Bob Bolitho and Ball.

Dallas got back in the game when Zeqinha scored off a penalty kick at 40:55, his fifth goal on five penalties this year after Bob Lenarduzzi had been called for tripping Dallas forward El Indio Gomez.

The second Dallas goal followed at 59:44 on a shot by Kevin Kewley, who had just entered the game as a sub for George Ley.

Ray Lewington scored the winner in the 65th minute after a quick running exchange with Hector.

Fred Hoster, the Tornado general manager the last two seasons, announced his resignation prior to the game.

Tampa Bay is one of the NASL's most explosive offensive teams, but forward Steven Wegerle says the Rowdies may earn a berth in Soccer Bowl '79 on the strength of their defence.

The Rowdies' defence, led by Nanny Andruszewski, shut down Detroit's vaunted Trevor Francis and Wegerle's goal with 20:52 left gave Tampa Bay a 1-0 victory.

"Our defence was really super," Wegerle said, "but, then, they have been most of the season."

Andruszewski, who was named the defensive player of the game Wednesday, shadowed Francis all night, holding the explosive English striker to just three shots on goal.

Wegerle said he felt confident the Rowdies will be able to hold off the Express in the return match between the two clubs Sunday in Tampa Stadium.

In other opening-round matches, Los Angeles Aztecs upset Washington Diplomats 3-1, Chicago Sting upset Fort Lauderdale Strikers 2-0 and Tulsa Roughnecks nipped Minnesota Kicks 2-1 in overtime.

Today, Toronto Blizzard plays defending champion New York Cosmos and San Diego Sockers face California Surf.

Thomas Sjoberg scored both goals to give Chicago its first playoff win in its five-year history. The victory was the Sting's third straight shutout.

Alan Woodward scored with 3:45 left in the second overtime to give Tulsa its win over Minnesota after scoring the tying goal at 63:17.

Forward Hubert Smeets scored twice as Los Angeles beat Washington.

Meanwhile, in Portland, Timbers' board of directors decided to keep the team operating in Portland while seeking investors who can provide capital to attract better players.

"The mood, surprisingly, was very good," general manager Kent Kramer said after a meeting of the five directors. "It was the opinion of everyone not to make any hasty decisions, to continue to operate and at the same time investigate the possibility of a sale or restructuring."

Oregon Soccer, Inc., which operates the Timbers, is owned by about 60 Portland area people.

Timbers attracted an average of 11,172 persons a game while compiling an 11-19 record this yearf and are expected to face an operating loss of about $500,000 this year.

Aussie sailors take cup

PLYMOUTH, England (AP) — Australia unofficially won the Admiral's Cup yachting series Wednesday, with its three boats safely in from the Atlantic gales and ahead of the United States trio.

The series ended with the Fastnet race, which turned into a gigantic rescue operation as yachts foundered in mountainous seas. Thirteen yachtsmen were killed and 29 yachts were sunk r abandoned.

Ted Turner, owner of Atlanta Braves baseball team and Atlanta Hawks basketball team, unofficially was the winner of the Fastnet race in his yacht, Tenacious. But he was not competing in the Admiral's Cup series.

Of the Admiral's Cup yachts, Britain's Eclipse was placed first on corrected times, and Jubile VI of France second. Then came Impetuous and Police Car, two of the Australian trio. Their times appeared to be good enough to win the series trophy for Australia.

Imp was the first American boat home, in fifth place among the Admiral's Cup yachts.

Ragamuffin of Australia was 12th, Williwaw of the United States 13th and Aries of the United States 16th.

Official times and placings will not be confirmed until tonight.

When the Fastnet race began from Cowes last Saturday, Ireland led the Cup standings with 649 points. The U.S. team had 635 and Australia 626.

Two of Ireland's three yachts were stricken by the gales and limped to port, and the Irish dropped out of the running.

B.C. girls trail in junior meet

CORNER BROOK, Nfld. (CP) — Rebecca Stark of Armdale, N.S., shot a women's course record 76 to grab a four-stroke lead Wednesday in the Canadian junior women's and interprovincial golf championships at the Blomidon Golf Club.

Stark's five-over-par round broke the previous record of 81 she set last year during Newfoundland's amateur provincial championships. It also pushed Nova Scotia into the lead for the provincial crown for the first time in the event's 23-year history.

Nova Scotia leads Manitoba by five strokes, Ontario by six, British Columbia by seven and Quebec by nine.

Stark, an 18-year-old former resident of Corner Brook, took advantage of her knowledge of the course and fired 10 pars and two birdies.

Janine Getty of Burnaby, and Lynne Hurd of Parry Sound, Ont., are tied for second following rounds of 80.

Allison Orritt of Edmonton, Leslie Price of Collingwood, Ont., Nancy Moon of Swift Current and Monique Berard of Sorel, Que., are bunched at 82.

Nancy Callan, a 14-year-old Victorian out of Uplands golf club, was the low Islander with an 85.

Near-record fee for midfield star

MANCHESTER, England (Reuter) — England midfielder Ray Wilkins signed Wednesday for Manchester United in a deal which made him the second most expensive player ever to move from one British soccer club to another.

United paid Chelsea a fee reported to be $1.8 million (U.S.) for Wilkins, who will play his first game for his new club Saturday when the English league season begins.

"United is a club I have admired since I was a schoolboy," Wilkins said after the signing. "Chelsea is a good club, but I now feel I have joined a great club."

Britain's most expensive footballer is Trevor Francis, who cost European champions Nottingham Forest $2.2 million from Birmingham City.

Seniors shoot for zone crown

Jake Peters and Bruce Pelmore, who waged a playoff duel for the title last year, will find the home-course situation reversed when the British Columbia Zone One seniors' golf championship is played Friday.

Peters was on his home Victoria Golf Club course when he won the 1978 crown by beating Pelmore on the third extra hole. This time the 18-hole event is slated at Royal Colwood, where Pelmore is a member.

Two other former winners — Bill Thompson and Doug Peden — have also entered Friday's tourney, in which players are scheduled to start at the following times:

10:04 — J. Evans, N. Parson, B. Davies, J. Pierpoint.
10:12 — R. Harrington, R. W. Ford, T. A. Whitaker, R. Baker.

Rautins switches

TORONTO (CP) — Basketball star Leo Rautins of Toronto said Tuesday he will enter Syracuse University this fall instead of Marshall University.

Rautins, a high-scoring member of Canada's national basketball team, said that he decided on Syracuse because it is closer to his Toronto home.

Rautins started his college basketball career last year at Minnesota but this year announced he would not return to the Big Ten school. Later, he was recruited by Marshall coach Stu Aberdeen but his status became uncertain when Aberdeen died suddenly in June.

Because of his transfer, National Collegiate Athletic Association eligibility rules require Rautins to sit out the 1979-80 basketball season. He could resume playing the following season and he said Tuesday a career in the National Basketball Association remains his goal.

Full days for producer of Hello Larry series

By VERNON SCOTT

Scott's World

By Vernon Scott

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Joanna Gleason, the pretty, bossy radio producer of the Hello Larry series, combines domesticity, motherhood and a career with the chore of restoring her 60-year-old home in the Hollywood Hills.

She is abetted by husband Paul Gleason, an acting teacher and director of the Los Angeles Light Opera Musical Theater workshop.

Married five years, the Gleasons are the parents of a son, Aaron, 7 months. Joanna is the daughter of TV game show host Monty Hall, a proud grandfather who is a frequent visitor.

Aaron played an unseen and unsuspecting role in his mother's performance in the first episode of the NBC-TV series.

"I discovered I was pregnant last summer when we were scheduled to film the pilot show," Joanna says, laughing. "They delayed the production for one reason or another until I was seven months along.

"When we finally filmed the pilot, they put me in a concealing wardrobe, had me sitting down in several scenes and standing behind potted palms to cover up my condition. I guess it worked. Not too many people detected my pregnancy."

Aaron has a nanny who takes care of the infant during the day while Joanna and Paul are at work. Joanna doubts if her son will make a post-natal appearance on the series.

Joanna's days are crowded with activity. She's up at 5:30 every morning to read the newspapers, care for Aaron and organize her day. Her schedule at the studio is an uncomplicated 9-5 job.

She and Paul moved into their old home four months ago and are having the hardwood floors refinished along with restoring old-fashioned interior molding and a stone fireplace.

Both Gleasons are talented stained glass window artists, their handiwork complementing the existing beveled glass casement windows.

Their furniture is a combination of modern rattans and natural fiber couches and chairs set off by French country antique tables and a collection of Oriental vases.

"This is the era in our lives when we are nesting," Joanna says, "and it's just great to be spending this much time at home. It's a luxury."

Canadian-born Joanna has spent the last several years in regional repertory companies. She also devoted a year to I Love My Wife on Broadway.

Later this year the Gleasons will modernize their kitchen, making it a combination kitchen-family room. Joanna and Paul are top-flight chefs and spend hours together at the range preparing gourmet feasts for friends. They entertain often.

"The kitchen is the centre of our lives," Joanna says. "I'm good at Italian dishes and French sauces. Paul's real killer is a goose stuffed with a chicken, stuffed with a squab. Between each variety of poultry is a layer of pate. It's a delicious two-day project.

"I rarely eat breakfast or lunch. Instead I snack all day long on fruit, almonds, pieces of chicken, vegetables and tea. I taper off in the late afternoon so I can enjoy a big dinner."

The family has no pets, but they do play hosts to a wild possum who inhabits their backyard.

Joanna is most comfortable around the house in jeans, one of Paul's shirts and bare footed. The network provides a chic wardrobe of tweed and silk dresses.

Paul and Joanna stay fit by visiting a nearby gym. Both are avid tennis players and recently have taken up roller skating.

Ancient graveyard

PEKING (UPI) — Chinese archeologists have unearthed 29 tombs containing many well-preserved corpses buried 3,000 years ago, the Xinhua news agency reported.

The official news agency said the arid and stony burial ground in China's sparsely populated northwestern Xinjiang province was a cemetery for a minority nationality.

The corpses remained in a good state of preservation because of Xinjiang's low humidity, scientists said.

"The corpses themselves are extremely dry.

Jack Bass has a scheme that could make you rich

By PAUL NICHOLSON
Times Staff

Save up a few dollars and invest in mortgages.

Would you pay $10 for someone to tell you little more than that?.

Well, hundreds are. They're lining up at bookstores to hand Winnipeg lawyer-author Jack Bass that kind of cash for a copy of his book, How to Send Your Money Out to Work.

In an interview Tuesday, Bass said his plans aren't get-rich-quick schemes, but a sincere effort to teach people how to better manage their money for future security and financial independence.

"The way things are going with the economy, the penalties are stiff if you don't manage your money well," he said.

With a little effort and a solid goal, plus a couple of hours to read his book, almost anyone on almost any income can rid themselves of debt and get embarked on a profitable investment campaign, he claims.

His looseleaf book is in two parts — learning how to save to create the investment money and how an individual works out his investment plan.

The key to successful investment is to put money into mortgages, he says in his book.

Bass has been a financial consultant and taught a course at the University of Manitoba on money management.

He says he has seen the results of people who live on credit cards.

"I see thousands in Winnipeg who are over their heads in debt," he says.

"When I sue them, they come into my office to talk to me. I see how it happens and I see what happens to them."

Bass' university course was soon supplemented by his book in an attempt to reach a wider audience. It started with a modest first run of 500 copies aimed only at the Winnipeg market.

But suddenly the book took off and a second run of 1,500 is being distributed in B.C., Regina and Saskatoon. A third printing is in the works for eastern Canada and then it's off to Los Angeles next year.

Bass practices what he preaches.

He says he has well over a million dollars out in mortgages, so he is, on paper at least, a millionaire.

The success of his book doesn't surprise him. The timing was perfect, especially in B.C. where inflation fear has combined with investment consciousness brought on by the sale of B.C. Resources Investment Corporation shares.

"If you use a 10 per cent inflation figure as a bench mark, then you've got to make you money work harder than that if you're going to keep ahead."

Is BCRIC a good investment?

"It's very, very conservative. No one is going to make a fortune on those shares."

BCRIC will do very well if it can return 10 per cent a year. Most of the types of companies BCRIC could buy with its nearly $500 million in ready cash earn less than 10 per cent. And because the company will be under such close public scrutiny, it can't make any risky investments.

If it did gamble and lose a few million dollars, hundrds of little old ladies would write personal letters to Premier Bill Bennett, Bass predicts.

BCRIC is no better an investment than any bond issue that returns about 10 per cent.

Far better, he argues, are mortgages.

Buy an old house, fix it up and sell it as soon as possible. Do this a couple of times and then get into an apartment block.

Apartment blocks are Bass' favorite investment.

In general avoid the stock market. If your stocks are returning less than 10 per cent, get rid of them and buy real estate, he advises.

Bass said his favorite success stories among his clients are those close to retirement age who have put their money into stocks as retirement income.

Their brokers have recommended secure investments, but often they return only two or three per cent.

He encourages them to sell, and then puts their money into mortgages where they make 13 per cent.

Our pipers 6th best in world

The Victoria City Pipe Band, competing against more than 130 bands, placed sixth in the World Pipe Band Competition held Sunday in Nottingham, England.

The band was led by Pipe-Major Jamie Troy.

The band won an award for being the best dressed band from overseas.

The pipers, who paid their own way to England, will play at the Rothesay Highland Games at Rothesay, southwest of Glasgow, and at the Cowal Games at Dunoon, west of Glasgow, on Aug. 24.

The band, which has a record of marches and reels on the Iona label, was recorded for an album to be produced in England.

They return to Victoria Aug. 26.

Duncan taxis 'disgrace'

DUNCAN — Mayor Ken Paskin says council will pass a new bylaw to force taxi companies to keep their cabs clean.

He also criticized the dress and deportment of drivers.

"The condition of taxis locally is nothing short of a disgrace," he told city council.

The matter was discussed by council following a complaint from the Duncan-Cowichan Chamber of Commerce.

Don Chidley, owner of Commodore Taxi, supported the mayor.

He said the firm is applying for a rate increase.

"Then I will be able to afford better cars," he said.

Co-ed camp set

A four-day, inter-denominational co-ed teen camp will be held at Camp Columbia on Thetis Island Aug.24-28.

The camp is being hosted by Operation Trackshoes organizer Judith Armstrong, assisted by Patty Henley of the Victoria L'Arche community. It cost $28.

The program, open to teens of 15 years and over, includes swimming, hikes, a dance, barbecue, water festival, fun races, discussions, crafts, sports, music, drama and campfires.

Registration forms and further information can be obtained from the camp registrar, Ken Phillips, at 477-8364.

Walk of the Week

In the mood for a refreshing walk to help shed some of that excess poundage?

Or maybe just an outing to clear the cobwebs.

Try Thetis Lake Park with its cool woods, babbling creeks and rocky hillsides.

This 1,144-acre city-owned park is only 20 minutes travelling time for most people living in this area.

Because of its size, closeness to urban areas and its lakes (Upper and Lower Thetis and Prior Lake), it ranks as the most important recreational greenbelt area in the capital region. It offers swimming and some of the finest walks in the capital region.

Yet it's surprising the large number of people who have never seen Thetis, even some members of the city council responsible for initiating policies for its management. A recent questionnaire revealed only two out of nine alderman had visited the park.

And it has been estimated only 25,000 out of a population of more than 200,000 have seen the lakes. Visits number about 150,000 a year. Many, of course, are repeats.

To the Indians of long ago, the area was known as the Home of the Raven, or Raven Land, and to this day it's still heavily populated by large blackbirds, one of the favorite creatures in the mythology of the native people.

There is even a secluded hill, ringed by Douglas Fir, named Raven's Perch, at the west end of Thetis Lake.

You can get to the park from the Trans-Canada Highway or Highland Road.

Among its attractions are the trails through a 400-acre nature sanctuary — the first of its kind established in Canada. There you will see at different times of the year 412 species of herbaceous plants, shrubs and trees, 94 species of birds, 200 varieties of mushrooms and fungi and 69 species of moss.

But you don't have to be on the alert for all this. Simply drink in the beauty.

The sanctuary is managed by the Thetis Park Nature Sanctuary Association which also maintains the trails.

There are all types of walks, designed for the young and elderly.

One of the newest and most scenic is the Dr. Lewis J. Clark trail, named after one of the founders of the nature sanctuary and an outstanding conservationist. This runs east from the parking lot at the park's entrance, takes you to what is known as Bladderwort Pond and then to a high ridge where there are splendid views of Esquimalt harbor, the lake and the surrounding countryside.

The most popular walk is the White Trail which runs through the nature sanctuary on the east side of the lake, taking in Seymour hill. It was once part of an old Indian trail starting from the head of Esquimalt harbor, ending on the east coast.

The trails around the rim of Lower and Upper Thetis Lakes are easy walking but heavily used on weekends.

The more secluded trails are off Highland Road which runs through the park. Just past the pistol range, there is the Orange Trail, and further along, the Blue and Green Trails. They are all marked.

A walk growing in popularity is the McKenzie Lake Trail. It's a 2½-hour round trip, starting just over the bridge past Prior Lake. You can also get to McKenzie, to the north of Thetis, via a trail starting from the north side of Upper Thetis Lake.

There is plenty to see and interesting places to explore in Thetis. You can spend days walking the many trails, looking out for wildlife or getting to know the wide variety of plant colonies in the Land of the Raven.

And think of the favor you're doing your waistline.

Queen's kin joins force

SALISBURY (AFP) — A relative of the Queen, 21-year-old Simon Rhodes, has joined Zimbabwe-Rhodesia's police force, it was announced Tuesday. The force, still known under its colonial name, the British South African Police, would not comment on the appointment Rhodes' mother, is a first cousin to the Queen.

Lighter work, lighter eating

Royal Pineapple Rice Pudding a wholesome alternative

It's summertime, but the livin' isn't necessarily easy for the person who has to prepare the meals.

The foods served need to be light enough to be refreshing on a hot day but they also need to be satisfying.

There are a couple of ways to master this seemingly impossible task. The first is to have a light meal and a more hearty, yet nutritious, dessert. Royal Pineapple Rice Pudding fills the bill here. It's prepared with milk, eggs and rice — made extra yummy and flavorful with pineapple and coconut.

Or you can turn the idea around and serve a rice salad and a light fruit dessert. For the salad, the mixture of rice, pineapple, mushrooms, tomato, green onions and green pepper is a perfect main dish that needs only be accompanied by cold cooked meats or slices of cheese. It's a real delight for a summer brunch or dinner.

Rice is especially good to serve in the summer. A large amount can be cooked in advance and chilled, covered, until ready to use.

ROYAL PINEAPPLE RICE PUDDING

1 can (20-oz.) crushed pineapple in unsweetened juice
½ cup firmly packed brown sugar
¼ cup rum or 2 teaspoons rum extract
2 cups cooked rice
1 cup whipping cream
2 cups milk
3 large eggs
⅓ cup granulated sugar
2 teaspoons vanilla extract
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ cup flaked coconut

FOOD & nutrition

Combine undrained pineapple and brown sugar in a 1½-quart saucepan. Bring to a boil, reduce heat to slow-boil and cook 15 minutes or until thickened and most of liquid is absorbed. Stir frequently to avoid sticking. Add rum. Measure out ½ cup and set aside for topping. Spread remaining pineapple in a shallow baking dish, about 8½x8½x2 inches. Top evenly with rice. Heat cream and milk to barely scalding. Beat eggs, granulated sugar, vanilla and salt together. Slowly stir in hot liquid. Gently pour over rice. Sprinkle with coconut.

Place baking dish in pan filled with hot water about 1 inch deep. Bake at 350°F for 45 minutes or until custard is set. Remove from oven and set in pan of cold water to prevent further cooking. Serve warm or cold, topped with preserved pineapple. Makes six to eight servings.

MARINATED PENEAPPLE—RICE SALAD

Herbed Mustard Dressing*
1 can (20-oz.) pineapple chunks, drained
½ cup sliced fresh mushrooms
1 cup diced firm-ripe tomato
½ cup sliced green onions, including tops
¼ cup finely chopped green pepper
4 cups cooked rice, cooled
Small lettuce leaves

Prepare Herbed Mustard Dressing. Combine ⅓ cup dressing with pineapple chunks and mushrooms. Marinate 1 hour or longer in refrigerator. Meanwhile add tomato, onions, and green pepper to rice. Cover and chill. When ready to serve, add marinated pineapple mixture to rice; mix well. Turn into chilled salad bowl and garnish with small lettuce leaves. Drizzle with remaining dressing.

Makes six servings (1½ quarts).

* Herbed Mustard Dressing: Measure ⅓ cup oil, ¼ cup garlic flavor red wine vinegar, 2 teaspoons prepared mustard, 1 teaspoon sugar, ¾ teaspoon salt, ½ teaspoon dried mint and ¼ teaspoon each tarragon and paprika into blender jar. Blend or shake well.

Get out the can opener for this solid salad recipe

Pierre Franey

the 60-minute gourmet

NEW YORK — I have been asked a few thousand times over the years whether I ever eat and savor foods that come in cans and the answer, of course, is yes.

There are times when my appetite craves sardines; on occasion I will dine on canned tuna with great enjoyment; if there is absolutely no fresh salmon to be had, I can willingly feast on the canned variety.

The fact is, there are numerous dishes that can be made from pantry items that are highly palatable. Two or three years ago, on a trip through Italy, we were twice served tuna that had come from tins and that had been blended with the cooked white kidney beans known as cannellini.

This particular salad (it can serve as an appetizer or a main course) consists of simply opening two cans and blending the contents with various seasonings plus oil and vinegar.

Cannellini Beans With Tuna

1 can cannellini (white kidney beans), 20 ounces, drained, about 2 cups
¼ cup finely chopped scallions or onions
½ teaspoon finely minced garlic
½ teaspoon crumbled dried oregano
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
1 tablespoon red wine vinegar
Juice of half a lemon
¼ cup olive oil
Salt and freshly ground pepper to taste
2 cans tuna packed in oil, seven ounces each
Tomato slices for garnish.

1. Put the drained beans in a mixing bowl and add the scallions, garlic, oregano, parsley, vinegar, lemon juice, olive oil, salt and pepper.

2. Drain the tuna and flake it (not too finely). Add it to the bean mixture and toss gently. Serve garnished with sliced tomatoes.

Tuna and Macaroni Salad

1 cup elbow macaroni
Salt to taste
2 cans tuna packed in oil, seven ounces each, preferably imported
½ cup cubed sweet green or red pepper
½ cup finely chopped onion
1 egg yolk
2 teaspoons imported mustard
1 teaspoon wine vinegar
½ teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
Dash of tabasco
Freshly ground pepper to taste
1 cup olive oil
2 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
Tomato wedges for garnish
Hard-cooked eggs, quartered, for garnish.

1. Drop the macaroni into boiling water and add salt to taste. Boil about seven to nine minutes or until tender. Do not overcook. Drain well. Run cold water over the macaroni and drain thoroughly.

2. Put the macaroni into a mixing bowl. Drain the tuna and break it into one-inch pieces. Add it to the bowl. Add the pepper cubes and onion.

3. Put the yolk in another mixing bowl and add the mustard, vinegar, Worcestershire sauce, tabasco, salt and pepper to taste. Stir rapidly with a wire whisk and gradually add the oil. When thickened, add the mayonnaise to the macaroni mixture. Add the parsley and fold to blend.

4. Spoon and scrape the salad onto a round serving dish. Garnish with tomato and hard-cooked egg.

Yield: 4 to 6 servings.

Some ideas for leftovers

Fresh green beans too old to taste good can be shelled, dried and used for soups. A limp, green pepper can be chopped and frozen without blanching for later pizzas and tomato sauces. Corn dried in husks can be left to dry completely, then shelled and browned in butter. Add salt and store as a snack in a glass jar.

This decade has seen consumers take a greater interest in the food they eat. Today's people want to know exactly what food additives are being used.

According to the Canadian Food and Drug Regulations, a food additive is any substance which can become a part of a food, or can be expected to affect the characteristics of a food. There are about 20 different classifications of additives, including preservatives, sweetening agents and coloring compounds.

What is our government doing to ensure that the food additives in use are safe?

All of these questions are answered in the 15-page booklet, Guide to Food Additives. The booklet also contains tables which list the various additives that are permitted in Canada, along with the foods in which they are most likely to be found.

Chili corn bread

1 cup butter or margarine
1 cup sugar
4 eggs
1 (4-ounce) can diced green chilies
1 (1-pound) can cream style golden corn
½ cup shredded jack cheese
½ cup shredded Cheddar cheese
2 teaspoons bacon-onion seasoning
1 cup sifted flour
1 cup sifted yellow cornmeal
4 teaspoons baking powder

Cream together butter and sugar. Add eggs one at a time, mixing well after each addition. Add chilies, corn, cheeses and bacon-onion seasoning. Blend well. Sift together flour, cornmeal and baking powder. Add to corn mixture and blend well. Pour into a greased and floured 12x8-inch baking dish. Place in an oven heated to 350 degrees and immediately reduce heat to 300 degrees. Bake for 1 hour. Cut into squares to serve. Makes 12 servings.

EASY CHILI CORN BREAD

1 (4-ounce) can diced green chilies
1 cup shredded Cheddar or jack cheese
1 (14-ounce) package or 2 (8½-ounce) packages corn bread or corn muffin mix
1 cup milk
2 eggs

Combine chilies with cheese. Prepare corn bread mix with milk and eggs according to package directions. Pour half the batter into a greased 12x8-inch pan. Spread chili-cheese mixture evenly over batter. Cover with remaining half of batter. Bake at 400 degrees about 30 minutes, or until golden brown. Remove from oven, cut into squares and serve hot. Makes 12 squares.

Pasta, seafood sauce is a tasty revelation

Craig Claiborne

One of the great revelations to come about within the past few years is the awakening in the public's consciousness that pasta in all its multifarious forms — spaghetti, linguine, ziti and so on — need not invariably be served with tomato sauce, meat sauce or meatballs.

Among the most gratifying, interesting and delicate sauces with which to enrobe pasta are those made with fish or seafood of one variety or another.

This is a propitious time for such sauces, now that fish and seafood are generally abundant.

Spaghetti con cozze
(Spaghetti with mussels, Sicilian-style)

2 quarts mussels, well scrubbed
¼ cup dry white wine
2 sprigs fresh thyme or ½ teaspoon sprigs fresh thyme or ½ teaspoon dried
1 bay leaf
2 sprigs fresh parsley
Freshly ground black pepper
¼ cup olive oil (see note)
1 teaspoon finely chopped garlic
2 tablespoons capers
¼ cup pitted black olives, preferably imported
¼ cup finely chopped parsley
Salt
½ teaspoon hot red pepper flakes
1 pound spaghetti or spaghettini, preferably imported.

1. Put the mussels in a kettle and add the wine, thyme, bay leaf, parsley sprigs and black pepper to taste. Cover tightly and cook until mussels open, tossing occasionally as they cook. Cooking time should be about five minutes. Remove from the heat. Strain the mussel liquid and set aside.

2. Heat the oil in a saucepan and add the garlic. Cook briefly and add the capers. Cook briefly and add the olives. Remove from the heat. Stir in the chopped parsley and one-quarter cup of the reserved mussel liquid. Add freshly ground black pepper to taste and a little salt. Add the hot red pepper flakes.

3. Cook the spaghetti to the desired degree of doneness.

4. Remove the mussels from the shells. If desired, remove and discard the small rubberlike band around the mussels.

5. Add the mussels to the sauce. Heat briefly and serve with the spaghetti.

Yield: Four servings.

Note: A dark, heavy olive oil is recommended for this dish.

Spaghetti with whiting sauce

3 cleaned whiting, without heads, about 1¼ pounds
1 bay leaf
1 sprig fresh thyme
3 sprigs fresh parsley
Salt and freshly ground pepper
¼ cup olive oil
1 teaspoon finely minced garlic
3 tablespoons finely chopped parsley
¼ teaspoon grated lemon ring
1 pound spaghetti or spaghettini, cooked according to package directions.

1. Place the whiting close together in one layer in a casserole. Add water to cover, bay leaf, thyme, parsley, salt and pepper to taste.

2. Bring to the boil and let simmer, barely, about five minutes. Remove from the heat. Drain, but reserve one-quarter cup of the cooking liquid.

3. When the fish is cool enough to handle, carefully remove the skin and discard. Take the flesh from the bone in large lumps. There should be from 1½ to two cups.

4. Heat the oil in a skillet and add the garlic. Cook gently without browning. Remove from the heat. Add the chopped parsley, lemon rind and the reserved cup of cooking liquid.

5. Cook the spaghetti to the desired degree of doneness. Drain.

6. Add the fish to the sauce. Handle gently. Stir to barely blend. Serve with the spaghetti with the sauce.

Yield: Four servings.

Ed Giobbi's fish-head pasta

1 or 2 very fresh fish heads, gills removed (see note)
Salt
3 ribs celery, quartered
6 sprigs fresh parsley
3 carrots, scraped and cut into two-inch lengths
1 bay leaf
1 onion, peeled and quartered
16 peppercorns, crushed
1 pound linguine, lingue di passeri or spaghetti
5 tablespoons olive oil
1 tablespoon chopped garlic
½ to 1 teaspoon red pepper flakes, according to taste
Two-third cup finely chopped parsley.

1. Place the fish heads in a kettle and add water to cover, salt to taste, celery, parsley sprigs, carrots, bay leaf, onion and peppercorns. Bring to the boil and reduce the heat. Simmer 20 minutes, skimming the surface as necessary. Strain and reserve the broth. Let fish heads cool.

2. When fish heads are cool enough to handle, pick them over to remove all bits of meat. Discard the skin and bones. Set the meat aside.

3. Bring the fish broth to the boil. Add the linguine and cook, stirring, to the desired degree of doneness.

4. When the linguine is almost done, heat three tablespoons of oil in a deep skillet or casserole. Add the garlic and when it starts to brown, quickly drain the linguine and add it. Add the flaked fish, pepper flakes, chopped parsley and remaining oil. Toss and serve piping hot in hot bowls.

Yield: Four servings.

Note: Cod heads are especially good in this dish, although any white-flesh, non-oily fish will do. One large head — two to three pounds — is preferable to two small ones.

Spaghetti with smoked salmon in cream

¼ cup smoked salmon cut into thin slices
½ cup green peas, preferably fresh
Salt
1 tablespoon butter
¾ cup heavy cream
Freshly ground pepper to taste
⅛ teaspoon grated nutmeg
2 tablespoons loosely packed, shredded, fresh basil leaves
1 pound spaghetti or spaghettini, cooked according to package directions.

1. Stack the salmon slices. Cut the slices into one-inch cubes. Set aside.

2. Cook the peas briefly in boiling salted water. When just tender, drain. Set aside.

3. Heat the butter in a skillet, and when it is hot, add the salmon cubes, stirring. Cook quickly. Add the cream and cook over high heat about one minute.

4. Add the peas, pepper to taste, nutmeg and basil leaves.

5. Cook the spaghetti to the desired degree of doneness. Drain. Heat the sauce briefly and serve with the spaghetti.

Yield: Four servings.

Dear Abby

by Abigail Van Buren

Don't leave pets in cars

DEAR ABBY: I am a volunteer with the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals. So far this summer we have had several cases of pets who were overcome by heat prostration after having been left in automobiles parked in the hot sun.

A few years ago you had a terrific piece in your column about this problem. I am enclosing it. Would you please consider a rerun?

EILEEN R.

DEAR EILEEN: You're doggone right I will:

DEAR PET OWNERS: With summer here, please do not take your pet along for the ride and leave him locked in a parked car while you run errands and shop.

When the temperature is 85F degrees outside, the temperature inside a parked car (even with the windows slightly open) will rech 102 degrees within 10 minutes. And in 30 minutes it will reach 120 degrees.

The normal body temperature of a dog is approximately 102 degrees, and it can withstand approximately 108 degrees for a very short time before suffering irreparable brain damage or death.

If you must leave your pet locked in a parked car — leave him home.

P.S. My pet consultant says never park a car in the sun — even with the windows open — if a pet is inside.

DEAR ABBY: I have a strange problem. Should I be the matron of honor at my ex-husband's wedding?

I know the woman he's marrying (slightly) but we're really not all that close. I neither like nor dislike her. I still can't figure out why she asked me.

My husband has asked our two children, ages 5 and 9, to be in the wedding party, so of course they will be there. I am not carrying the torch for my ex, but I have no desire to attend this wedding.

How should I handle it? I don't want to make up any lies.

EX-WIFE WITH NO REGRETS

DEAR EX: Why lie? Decline with thanks. It's not necessary to explain why.

DEAR ABBY: Did a letter in your column ever ring a bell with us!

Upon retiring and moving to San Diego several years ago, we started to hear from acquaintances from our home state. They said, "We've heard so much about San Diego — we'd love to come out and spend a week or so with you — seeing the sights and enjoying the weather."

Here's how we handled it: We'd write back saying, "We're so happy you're planning to come to San Diego. When you get here and get settled, be sure to give us a ring. We'd love to get together for a drink."

You'd be surprised at the number of people who wrote back to say, "We've changed our plans . . . we'll take a raincheck."

We enjoy guests, but not the type who invite themselves.

Doctors condemn hormone dieting

TORONTO (CP) — Treatment for obesity consisting of daily injections of a female hormone along with a daily diet of 500 calories has been condemned by the Ontario College of Physicians and Surgeons.

In its annual report, the college said: "There is no convincing evidence that HCG (human chorionic gonadotrpin) is useful in the treatment of obesity (and) its use for this purpose should be discouraged."

The college statement rejects claims that the hormone suppresses appetite or that it has a metabolic effect on fat. Furthermore, a diet of 500 calories a day may be hazardous, it says.

The college statement follows a report last November that several Toronto and Hamilton-area doctors were using the treatment on patients and achieving what they believed to be positive results.

Patients receive the hormone by injection into the buttock region and follow a low-calorie diet. They are expected to lose between half a pound and 1½ pounds daily.

The therapy caused a controversy four years ago in Quebec and has been all but halted in that province.

Brain chemicals showing promise

Perhaps never in the history of modern science has there been more excitement than there is today about substances known as endorphins.

These are chemicals that are found in the brain and are responsible for nature's own method of controlling pain. Research on these intriguing compounds is providing information that gives promise for the greater understanding of mental illness, emotional behavior and narcotic addiction.

There are some scientists who even believe that the endorphins may adequately explain why acupuncture can be effective in the treatment and control of intense pain. It is suggested that the production of these endorphins may actually be stimulated by the acupuncture technique.

It is hoped that before long synthetic endorphins will be available as a substitute for narcotics that are addictive and cause severe body reaction. There seems to be no limitation of the possibilities that are now on the horizon for the use of these compounds for seriously depressed patients and even for schizophrenics.

Diarrhea, the bane of existence of travellers abroad, may soon be preventable. Dr. David A. Sack of the John Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore has been using a drug called doxycyclime and has been able to prevent most episodes of traveller's diarrhea.

One hundred milligrams of this antibiotic, when taken daily, before diarrhea sets in, have been most effective in reducing this intestinal problem.

Dr. Sack studied a large group of Peace Corps volunteers in Kenya. He said that in the first four weeks of his study, only one of the 18 subjects treated with doxycyclime developed traveller's diarrhea.

The pain of osteoarthritis and rheumatoid arthritis is said to be alleviated by the injection of special types of lubricants. Dr. V. Vasilionkaitis of the U.S.S.R. is studying a group of special lubricants and reports a decrease in pain and stiffness, and greater freedom of movement of arthritic joints.

Make 24 crepes

150 ml sifted all-purpose flour
1 ml salt
15 ml sugar
4 beaten eggs
350 ml milk
30 ml melted fat

Mix dry ingredients. Gradually beat in eggs and milk to make a smooth batter. Stir in fat. Pour 25 ml batter into well-greased hot frypan; tilt pan to form a thin layer on bottom. Cook over medium heat until lightly browned on one side (1 to 2 minutes). Turn and brown other side. Makes 24 15-cm crepes.

Debunking protein myth . . . it's not a 'super food'

FOOD FOR THOUGHT

Dr. Jean Mayer
Dr. Johanna Dwyer

The field of nutrition has its fair share of myths and misinformation. And as the subject of what's good for you to eat has grown in popularity, some of these misconceptions have taken on the aspect of gospel.

For instance, it's commonly believed in some quarters that protein is a "super food" and that the best "protein food" is meat, especially beef. But don't believe it.

It's true that without protein life could not exist. But protein is only one of 40-odd essential nutrients, all of which must be present in the diet in the right amounts for nutritional health. Proteins build and repair tissues. They are part of enzymes and hormones, blood cells and antibodies. Once we have taken in enough protein to fulfill these functions, however, the excess in either used for energy or stored as fat.

Most North Americans get well above the Recommended Dietary Allowance — 56 grams per day for an adult man and 46 for a non-pregnant, non-nursing woman. Indeed, many people consume more than twice as much as they need. And when that protein comes from high-priced meats, they're paying a costly premium for extra calories.

It is true that our body uses the proteins found in animal foods most efficiently, since that proteins closely resembles those in our bodies. But when it comes to what is the best source of protein, breast milk, closely followed by whole eggs and cows' milk, ranks highest. Proteins in meat, poultry and fish come next.

However, since red meats such as beef often contain a good amount of fat as well as protein, fish and poultry, pound for pound, are usually your best protein buy.

A second myth that needs to be put to rest is the concept that a ounce of starchy carbohydrate is more fattening than an ounce of protein or fat.

The fact of the matter is that all food is fattening, if the calories it contains are more than are needed to provide the body with energy and, thus, are stored in the body's fat cells. Ounce for ounce carbohydrate, whether in the form of starch or sugar, has the same number of calories as protein, 4 per gram or 120 per ounce. That's less than half as many as fat, which contains nine per gram of 270 per ounce. Practically speaking, then, an ounce of a food high in fat will give you more of those fattening excess calories than on ounce of a food high in carbohydrate or protein.

People who shudder at the thought of having a slice of bread (with 75 calories) or a small baked potato (with 90 calories), but think nothing of putting a 100-calorie pat of butter or margarine on a serving of vegetables, should think again. And anyone who thinks of a hamburger as pure protein should consider that a three-ounce patty of lean beef still contains almost 10 grams of fat for almost half of its 185 calories.

A third persistent myth is that polyunsaturated fats have no calories. This is simply not true; they have. Polyunsaturated fats have gained a deserved reputation as the good guys of the fat family because of the very good evidence that a diet high in these fats tends to lower serum (or blood) cholesterol. But just because polyunsaturates play a role in lowering the risk of heart disease does not mean they are the fat of choice in the war against obesity. The fact is that whether it's highly unsaturated safflower oil or margarine or coconut oil or butter, which are largely saturated, the calories are the same. For oils, it's 120 calories per tablespoon. And for the butter and margarine, since they contain some water, it comes to 100.

The fourth myth we'd like to puncture is the belief that vitamins and minerals provide energy. Again, it's just not so. The only essential nutrients that provide calories are fat, protein and carbohydrate. (Alcohol also provides calories, but it's far from being essential.) Vitamins and minerals are essential to be sure, since they are needed to perform many vital functions. For example, calcium, phosphorus, and magnesium are particularly important to the bones and teeth. Sodium, potassium and chlorine are responsible for regulating the balance and pressure of body fluids, inside and outside the cells. Iron is essential for healthy blood cells and the transportation of oxygen. And, for instance, vitamin A is necessary for vision. Vitamin D is essential for proper bone formation, as are B-12 and folic acid for the development of normal red blood cells. But neither vitamins nor minerals provide calories in themselves.

While these misconceptions in themselves are not overly harmful, why not base your nutritional decisions on facts instead of myth?

Before you buy a new bicycle, take time to find out if parts are available locally. Ask the store's service department or call a bike repair shop near your home. "There's many a bike on the market for which we can't get parts, and you could be out the cost of a bike if we can't get parts," warned a busy bike repairman.

Some of the softest fabrics in summer wear are a blend containing rayon, a relatively weak fiber. Be sure you have plenty of sitting room in the skirt; otherwise, you may find the fabric separating at seam lines. Also check to make sure seam allowances inside are stitched to prevent fraying. Soft fibers fray easily with wear and laundering.

A colorful, stretchy belt costs about $7.50 if you buy it in "men's accessories." It costs about half that much when you shop at a fabric store that sells stretchy belting by the yard ($2) or inch (6 cents). Attach the length to a new buckle ($1.50) or old buckle with a needle and sturdy thread.

Judge says deputy A-G pressured him

VANCOUVER (CP) — Provincial court Judge Phil Govan said Wednesday he was treated harshly by the attorney-general's ministry after he made a court ruling which ministry officials did not agree with.

Govan was testifying at an inquiry into allegations that deputy attorney-general Dick Vogel interfered with the independence of the Richmond judge. The investigation began after the case was brought up in the legislature.

Govan said he was accused of being biased and asked to go elsewhere after he legally questioned the validity of a section of the newly-proclaimed Family Relations Act.

He said he received a call from Vogel on April 12 asking if he "wouldn't mind not sitting in the Richmond family court while this matter was being resolved."

Govan said he did not respond to Vogel's statement.

He said he objected to Vogel referring to the ruling as a "pretty good argument."

"It was a judgment," Govan said. "His department officials had given me no aid whatsoever."

Govan told inquiry commissioner Mr. Justice Peter Seaton that proper procedure following a controversial legal decision "would be an appeal, not a change in administrative matters."

The matter arose when Govan ruled that Section 6 of the family act giving jurisdiction to a provincial court judge is unconstitutional because it involves matters that can only be handled by higher courts.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom took the decision to the Supreme Court of Canada, which sent the case back to Govan.

Govan continues to sit in family court cases but is not ruling on cases involving the section in dispute.

Ministry officials amended the section following the ruling and Govan said he expects to test those changes next Tuesday.

On Tuesday, the inquiry was told of a private letter from Vogel to chief provincial court Judge Lawrence Goulet in which the deputy attorney-general asked Goulet to warn Govan to be more discreet "in respect of what he says" in future.

Goulet said he told Vogel he could not act on the request because Govan was particularly sensitive about such matters and a call would be inappropriate.

Infanticide charge laid after dump discovery

SPARWOOD (CP) — A 22-year-old local woman has been charged with infanticide, neglecting to obtain assistance in child birth and concealing the body of a child, after the body of a newborn infant was found Sunday in the town dump.

RCMP said Wednesday that the baby boy was apparently dead at birth. An autopsy to determine the exact cause and time of death will not be completed for about five days.

RCMP said they believed the mother panicked after the child was born and disposed of the body at the dump.

Police refused to identify the woman who will appear in court Sept. 6.

Grain car problem discussed

VANCOUVER (UPC) — Grain shippers and port officials met to discuss the manpower shortages said to be delaying grain movement, but no details were released on the talks.

The delays were first brought to light earlier this week when grain and port officials complained of an unprecedented backlog of grain cars waiting to be unloaded because there were not enough work gangs.

Reports said longshoremen were attracted to picking up night shifts instead of dayshifts because of the time-and-a-half pay scale in effect for late work.

Though no solutions to the lack of workers were disclosed Wednesday, Les Copan, vice president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union, Local 500, said "longshoring is a casual industry. "In essence they work when they want to."

Ed Isaac, manager of the Vancouver office of the Canadian Wheat Board, said Wednesday the port and grain officials may seek meetings with representatives of the longshoremen's union and the British Columbia Maritime Employers' Association.

Isaac said the shortage of longshoring gangs over the past couple of weeks had reduced grain movements by 10,000 tons per day.

Options studied for Duke Point

NANAIMO (CP) — The B.C. Development Corp. project manager at the Duke Point industrial development here says he is considering a variety of alternatives to get work started again at the site.

Nearly all development at the site has been halted since July 15 because of a jurisdictional labor fight between the B.C. and Yukon Building Trades Council, representing 17 construction unions, and the International Woodworkers of America.

Peter Breikff, the corporation's manager, said his agency feels caught in the middle of the dispute. He did not elaborate on what alternatives the corporation might follow to try to get work resumed.

Members of the building trades council have refused to work alongside the woodworkers at Duke Point because of a Canadian Labor Congress decision which gave the council authority over workers on new construction while the IWA was responsible for maintenance and repair.

WIN! $1,000.00 IN CASH PRIZES EVERY OTHER WEEK!

WIN! GRAND PRIZE TRIP FOR TWO TO HAWAII, By Wardair

The object is to match the official letters published every day with the letters in the grid which you have filled in with your name (see samples 1 and 2). When you have circled a row of letters across, vertically, or diagonally either way, send your entry in for the bi-weekly draw for cash prizes. You may submit as many entries as you wish per game, but each must be in a separate envelope.

THE NAME GAME
Rules and Procedures

Object of "The Name Game": To become eligible for prize drawings by matching letters of the alphabet, published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, with the letters in your name. Each game starts with a Saturday Times and ends in the Sunday Colonist two weeks later. The official entry form will be published every day. All members of a family may play. There is no age limit. You may enter more than once but only one entry per envelope may be submitted. As each game ends, you are invited to play the next game.

1. Using the official entry form or a reasonably hand-drawn facsimile (no mechanically reproduced forms accepted), start at the upper left hand corner and print your name continuously, one letter in each square, until all the squares are filled in. (For example, if your name is John Anderson, Sample 1 shows how to fill out your entry form.) Do not include punctuation.
Use your legal name, in a form which can be verified on your driver's licence, social security card or other official identification. You may use various forms of your first name (e.g. John, Jonathan or John S.), as long as your identity can be verified. No nicknames, please.
2. Letters for the Name Game will be published as follows: 4 letters Saturday Times and Sunday Colonist and 3 letters daily. When an official letter matches one in your diagram, circle it on your entry. That letter may appear in more than one square on your diagram, but you may circle only one such letter (of your choice) each time. Since individual letters are selected at random, they may appear more than once — even on the same day. You may circle one such letter as many times as that letter is published. The same letters will be published in the Victoria Times and The Daily Colonist, but may only be used once in any one entry.
3. When you match enough letters to complete one row on your diagram — horizontal, vertical or diagonal (corner to corner), as in Sample 2, you are eligible for the prize drawings for that game. Drawings for 15 prizes will be held every other week for 10 weeks. At each drawing $500 goes to the first name drawn, $100 to the next —, $50 each to the next 3, and $25 for the last 10 — (Winners must answer a time-limited skill-testing question before collecting prizes.) All names drawn will be returned to the drum for the grand prize drawing.
4. Mail your completed entry form to: The Name Game, Victoria Press, P.O. Box 1390, Victoria, B.C. V8W 3C4; postmarked no later than the Monday following the end of that game. Completed entries may also be delivered, in a sealed envelope, to Victoria Press, no later than Tuesday, the following day. The game number (such as 'Game 1', 'Game 2', etc.) must appear at the lower left-hand corner of the envelope.
5. All entries will be placed in a container and the winning entries will be drawn at random. Winners will be announced in the Colonist and Times on the Friday following the close of each game. The odds of winning will depend on the number of eligible entries received.
6. It is not necessary to buy the Times or Colonist to participate. Copies of the newspaper may be inspected free of charge at the newspaper's offices during regular business hours. Sorry, official letters will not be given over the phone.
7. Employees of the newspapers and members of their immediate families are not eligible to participate. Unclaimed or invalidly claimed prizes will be donated to a recognized charity at the close of the contest.
8. Winners agree to allow publication of their names, pictures and publicity in the Times and Colonist without additional consideration. Submission of an entry indicates acceptance of all game rules.
9. Decisions of Victoria Press judges in all matters relating to the The Name Game will be final.

RCMP tickets rescue boat

VANCOUVER (CP) — RCMP issued a ticket to one of two boats that transferred passengers from the grounded ferry Queen of Alberni to the Queen of Tsawwassen Aug. 9, the rescue boat's owner said Wednesday.

Horst Klein's boat received the ticket for an improperly displayed registration number and lack of proper lights, Klein's wife Joyce said.

Inmates beaten

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two men charged with rape were beaten by fellow prisoners while on a prison bus enroute to the provincial courthouse for interim court appearances Wednesday.

George Allen, Vancouver administrator for the sheriffs' department, said the two were taken to hospital, one with a possible broken nose and the second with a cut above the eye.

Safe landing

KEREMEOS (CP) — Five persons escaped injury Wednesday when a twin-engine airplane in which they were riding ran out of fuel and made an emergency landing in a hayfield. Pilot Henry Gunther, 43, of San Jose, Calif., was flying from Williams Lake to Penticton.

Stadium at PNE?

VANCOUVER (CP) — The four levels of government have agreed on the Pacific National Exhibition grounds as the location for a proposed sports stadium, Mayor Jack Volrich said Wednesday. His claim was immediately disputed by Martin Zlotnik, secretary of the Downtown Stadium Association.

Arson blamed

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Police and fire officials said today an arsonist was responsible for a fire that destroyed five houses under construction and spread through dry grass to threaten other dwellings, but no arrests have been made. Damage is estimated at $300,000.

Fight card vetoed

NANAIMO (CP) — The Nanaimo Regional District rejected a request Tuesday to allow another So You Think You're Tough boxing match here Sept. 20. Most of the board's directors said it would be foolish to follow a collision course with the attorney-general's department after the department hinted a similar boxing match on July 19 might be illegal. The matches involve local amateur toughies who take to the ring to battle for money prizes.

Walkouts worsen

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia forest and pulp industries continued to be hit by walkouts Wednesday as workers in two unions protested employers' actions.

A number of sawmills in the central Interior were picketed by members of the International Woodworkers of America, unhappy with the negotiating position taken by the North Cariboo Forest Labor Relations Association in contract talks which broke off Monday.

About 900 pulp workers walked off the job Tuesday over local disagreements.

Jack Munro, western regional president of the woodworkers, said the forest industry had been unwilling to discuss a change in expiry date for the northern Interior contracts, which expire Aug. 31.

The union is demanding that the northern agreements, covering 5,000 members, expire in June along with contracts covering 38,000 woodworkers in the coastal and southern Interior regions.

Talks are scheduled to resume later this week after member companies have been consulted.

Before the judge

A provincial court judge Wednesday criticized lenient fellow judges and corrections authorities before jailing a 24-year-old escaper for six months.

"And I think it ought to be longer," Judge Blake Allan told Marek Bohdan Czyzewski who pleaded guilty to being unlawfully at large for 41 days from Wilkinson Road jail.

On April 18, 1978, he was given 22 months in jail for a string of holdups in Victoria. He was convicted of robbery with violence after a Feb. 11 holdup at Freddy The Freeloaders, 1537 Fort, and two counts of attempted robbery with violence involving Studio 35 Photography, 634 Humboldt, and The Jewelry Box, 910 Government, the same day.

Czyzewski had four previous convictions for robbery and had been given two years in each case.

William Alexander Miller, a principal officer in charge of programs at the community corrections centre at Wilkinson Road jail, told the court Czyzewski was cleared for the temporary absence pass program June 13 and was transferred to Wilkinson Road from Jordan River camp where he had been serving his sentence.

At that time, Miller said, Czyzewski was due for release Oct. 10 and was given day passes to seek employment, which he found June 27 at the Oak Bay Beach Hotel. Czyzewski was considered a model prisoner and qualified for socialization permits, which he had used before July 4 without incident.

However, on July 4, he was given a pass to go to the Henderson Park Recreation Centre in Oak Bay but failed to return by 11 p.m. as required.

Miller said Czyzewski phoned the corrections authorities at least five times after he was unlawfully at large and, shortly after 2 p.m. Tuesday, called again to say he was ready to turn himself in. Miller said he went to get Czyzewski at the Mayfair Shopping Centre as arranged over the phone.

"An utterly weak attitude on the part of authorities," Allan said, referring to two previous convictions for being unlawfully at large for which Czyzewski was given terms of one month concurrent to a sentence being served and one day.

"And he's had leniency from the corrections authorities, time and time again," Allan added.

"Are you not going to let me say anything, your honor?" Czyzewski inquired after Allan seemed unreceptive to duty legal-aid lawyer Jasper Bomhof's request.

"You have a lawyer," the judge replied.

Bomhof then said Czyzewski felt it was only just that he was penalized for the offence.

Allan denied bail to 29-year-old Delores Isobel Granfield, jointly charged with two men in the Aug. 5 break-in at McGill and Orme pharmacy, 1105 Pandora, and possession of three, 80-ounce bottles of Novahistex-DH, a cough medicine.

They were remanded for one week to await a preliminary hearing set for Oct. 3.

Also denied bail by Judge William Ostler was 32-year-old John James Pilatzke, 5433 Densmore.

Pilatzke, 24-year-old Lori Ami Still, of 2549 Dowler Place and 3134 Alder, and 23-year-old Robert Woolcock, 3459 Plymouth, are jointly charged with the June 19 break-in at Fay's Brentwood One-Hour Dry Cleaning, 7183 West Saanich.

Pilatzke, who suffered bullet wounds from a gun fired by Constable Neil Laing of Central Saanich, also is charged with possession of a weapon.

The preliminary hearing has been set for two days starting Nov. 7.

★ ★ ★

A pre-sentence report was ordered by Ostler for 24-year-old Leslie Ann Gutierrez, 1247 Alton.

She pleaded guilty to attempted fraud in connection with a false prescription order June 17 at the Shoppers Drug Mart store in the Town and Country Shopping Centre.

Crown counsel Richard Law said a woman phoned the pharmacy section of the store at about 2:15 that afternoon and identified herself as a doctor and ordered a prescription of 50 tablets. Shortly before 6 p.m., Gutierrez walked into the store and attempted to claim the prescription and, when refused, fled. She was stopped with her 1½-year-old daughter in a Toyota on Blanshard Street by Saanich police.

Law said the woman was addicted to prescription drugs and was on probation until March 15 of next year.

Fined for drinking-driving offences were: Irene Lily Child, 49, of 1306 Astle, $400; Michael Gerard Collins, 21, of HMCS Gatineau, $400; David William Collins, 20, of 380 Belmont, $350; and Calvin Edward Misner, 29, of 902 French, $350.

Opening lead — king of clubs.

Sylvia always wanted to play in the toughest game in town. She'd walk into the club, look over the four or five tables in progress, and promptly hie herself to the one where the experts were playing.

The day this hand came up she had cut into a table where the four experts who were playing there had each won some twenty or more regional or national championships.

On the above deal, Sylvia opened the bidding with two diamonds and got to five diamonds on the sequence shown. West led the king of clubs and continued with the ace — which Sylvia, in a grandiloquent display of trump strength, ruffed with the ace. She then cashed the king of diamonds and A-K of spades.

At this point the deuce of diamonds fell out of her hand face up on the table. A brief discussion ensued, West contending that the deuce was a played card which Sylvia could not withdraw.

Sylvia's nature was such that she was always willing to abide by the strict rules of the game.. Besides, she hated arguments, and though she wasn't sure the laws required her to play the deuce, she agreed to do so.

East won dummy's seven of diamonds with the nine and returned a heart. By this time the wondrous thing that had occurred began to dawn on Sylvia. She went up with the ace of hearts and led her five of diamonds to dummy's eight. Dummy's Q-J of spades took care of her Q-10 of hearts and she made five diamonds.

Later analysis revealed that if Sylvia had trumped West's ace of clubs low she would have gone down, and that if she had not played a low diamond to dummy's 8-7 she would also have gone down.

Everyone in the club marvelled at the outcome, and they also agreed that West was entitled to be credited with a magnificent assist.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

Astrological Forecast for Friday, August 17
BY SYDNEY OMARR

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Define terms, get to heart of matters, check quality of material, be aware of property values. Pisces, Virgo persons figure prominently. Hold off on decisions—until you get details and perceive subtle nuances.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Accept pressure as a challenge. Capricorn, Cancer persons figure in scenario. Older individual sets stage for upswing in your prestige. Brother, sister or other close relative relays a special message.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Spotlight on learning what to retain, what should be discarded. Let go of "security blanket." It is time for cold plunge—into future. Cash flow gets boost. You'll feel better, following temporary sense of having been abandoned.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): New starts in new directions, the flow of creative juices, romance, love, the right move at the right time—these are emphasized. Cycle high—judgement, intuition are on target. Leo, Virgo and Aquarius persons play key roles.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Follow through on hunch, learn through teaching process. Individual who aided you in recent past is back on scene. Clandestine meeting has direct effect on you. Keep options open, protect self in clinches.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Accent on relief of pressure, realization that friends can aid in making wishes come true. Social life is highlighted—you get "proof" of popularity. What might seem a serious relationship is likely to be fun-and-games.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Dig in, take a stand, aim towards goal, refuse to compromise principles. Superiors, those in authority will lend support, no matter how reluctant they may appear. You're going places! Know it, act accordingly.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Steer away from direct confrontation. What seems "out of reach" is actually coming your way. Means be receptive rather than aggressive—Taurus, Libra and another Scorpio figure prominently. Family member does have right to special consideration.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be cautious when it comes to cosigning, loans, providing references. Avoid self-deception, see situations, places and people as they actually exist. Be alert to subtle nuances; someone is trying to tell you something of importance.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Play waiting game; delays ultimately work to your advantage. Go slow, be thorough, accept challenge and responsibility. Be positive concerning legal rights and permissions. One close to you needs reassurance.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Read Scorpio message for valuable hint. Accent on light touch, basic services, getting together with one who shares your work interests. Keep resolutions concerning diet, nutrition and health. Aries, Libra individuals play key roles.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You are stimulated by new hope and a very special person. Stress independence, initiative, willingness to shake off any sign of lethargy. Leo, Aquarius natives figure prominently. You get proverbial second chance for happiness and fulfillent. Make the most of it!

IF AUGUST 17 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY...you seldom do things halfway—for you, it is all or nothing. Many persons feel that you go to extremes. Others rely on you to finish what has been started, to provide leadership and inspiration. Capricorn, Cancer persons play important roles in your life. November could be one of your most memorable months of 1979, a year featuring changes in lifestyle, possible acquisition of a home and a significant domestic adjustment. Financial pressures will be relieved, you'll make valuable social and business contacts before the month of August is finished. In September, family situation haromonizes.

McCULLOCH — John Auld, beloved husband of Alice, peacefully in his sleep on August 15, 1979, after a long illness, at the Saanich Peninsula Hospital in his 93rd year. Mr. McCulloch was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, on May 21, 1887 and, as a small child, moved with his family to Runcorn, England. He was a pioneer resident of Sermans, Saskatoon, homesteading there with his parents and brothers in 1905. He married Alice Lintott in Raymore, Saskatoon, in 1919 and they made their home in Semans until 1937 when they moved to Victoria with their family. Their home, for many years, was at 3775 Tillicum Road and more recently at 5370 Alderley Road with their daughter and son-in-law, Arline and John Parrish. Predeceased by two brothers, Hugh in May, 1979, and William in September, 1966, he is survived by his loving wife Alice, his daughters and sons-in-law, Keith and Campbell Small, Arline and John Parrish; his son and daughter-in-law, Keith and Marie McCulloch; three grandsons, Mark Parrish, Bruce McCulloch and Rennie Parrish; three sisters-in-law, Doris McCulloch of Victoria, Agnes Lintott of Courtenay and Myrtle Lintott of Raymore, Saskatoon; many nephews and nieces.

Funeral services in McCall Bros. Chapel, Johnson at Vancouver Streets, on Friday, August 17, 1979, at 3:15 p.m. with the Rev. Dr. H. W. Kerley officiating. Interment at Royal Oak Burial Park. (Flowers gratefully declined.) Many thanks to the Saanich Peninsula Hospital staff and nurses.

McMICHAEL — As a result of an accident on August 11, 1979, David James of Dawson Creek, born in Victoria on August 6, 1952. He was a U.B.C. Graduate in applied Science and a Professional Engineer with Schlumberger Company at Dawson Creek. He leaves his parents, William and Helen McMichael and his grandmother, Mrs. D. W. Phillips of Saanichton; his sisters, Mrs. D. (Brenna) Afford of Nelson, Mrs. Mona Donnelly of Portland and Mrs. Diana Allan of Victoria; his brothers, William G. and Robert J. of Vancouver; his aunt, Mrs. M. E. B. McVicar of Port Alberni; cousin, Robert G. McVicar of Amsterdam; nieces, nephews and many friends here and at Dawson Creek.

Funeral service in McCall Bros. Chapel, Johnson at Vancouver Streets, on Friday, August 17, at 1:30 p.m. with the Rev. W. Z. VanDruten officiating. Interment at Royal Oak Burial Park.

RANDS — In Victoria, B.C., on August 13, 1979, Mrs. Mildred Ellen Rands, aged 72 years, born in Lanark, Saskatchewan, late residence, 1780 Fairfield Road. Predeceased by her husband, Lawrence H. Rands, in 1963. She leaves her sister, Ruth (Mrs. Fred Holliday), Victoria, B.C.; brother, Edgar Goodwin, Thousand Palms, California; nieces, Dolores, Gloria and Mickey; grandnieces, grand nephews and one great-grand nephew.

Service in the Lady Chapel of Christ Church Cathedral, 900 Quadra Street, Victoria, B.C., on Friday, August 17, 1979, at 3:00 p.m. Very Rev. Brian W. Whitlow officiating. Black tomatoes lacking moisture

GARDENING
Jack Beastall

As usual in August, calls are being received about tomato fruits that have turned black on the lower or blossom end.

Most gardeners experiencing this condition for the first time are sure some dreadful disease has hit their crop. Already one gardener reports pulling up every plant and putting them on the bonfire, and others are searching for some poisonous spray to lessen the trouble.

To set all minds at rest, it is not a disease nor will it damage the plants or infect the soil. The only disease that affects tomatoes in this area is the early and late blight of the related potatoes.

This occurs in seasons when skies are overcast and rain is frequent during June and July. I have only experienced it twice in 57 years, but it is more prevalent on the Lower Mainland where weather conditions encourage its development.

The black ends on tomato fruits are an environmental disorder called blossom-end rot. Knowing something of the growth habit of the tomato plant helps us to understand the cause.

Tomatoes, being bred from tropical plants, need a warm soil for rapid growth and early production of fruit. Constant watering lowers the soil temperature and delays development. But sufficient moisture must be available to the roots whenever making new growth, and that can be night or day if conditions are ideal.

Plants under observation have made four times the growth during hours of darkness when temperatures were suitable, than in daylight hours when the temperature was 15 degrees C. higher.

During these spurts of growth the plants need an increase of moisture from the roots. If the moisture is not in the soil, it is taken from other parts of the plants and moved to the growth area. This is often the cause of the older leaves yellowing.

Once fruits have formed they become the greatest reservoirs of moisture on the plant. It is this moisture that is withdrawn and transferred to the growing parts.

Loss of moisture from the fruits causes the cells to collapse, and the dead cells form the black leathery crust on the fruits.

When the cause is known it is possible to find a remedy. In this instance the remedy is compost.

When planting, a hole 18 inches in diameter is dug for each plant and filled with mixed coarse and screened compost. The compost retains the moisture in its sponge-like particles and the plant roots can obtain it as needed.

Soaking of the compost is achieved by placing an open-ended hose, or a hose with a fan-shaped water-breaker nozzle, at the root of each plant. With the tap barely opened the slow trickle will saturate the compost in about 15 minutes.

This is done early in the morning when the plants and the soil are at their lowest temperature. At this time of day the water in the mains is usually warmer than the air temperature and the plants suffer a minimum of cooling.

In this way the gardener catches two fish on one hook. The compost holds the moisture in readiness for the plant's demands, and frequent watering, which is detrimental to early fruiting and ripening, is avoided. And as an added bonus, blossom-end rot does not develop.

With the compost-filled holes this method of watering has been done once every seven days to date, and no blossom-end rot has been developed.

Police review hooker law

VANCOUVER (CP) — The federal government's refusal to tighten soliciting laws will be a main topic at the Canadian Association of Chiefs of Police meeting here next week.

Vancouver Chief Constable Don Winterton said he was very concerned about the statement by Justice Minister Jacques Flynn last week that there will be no changes made in the Criminal Code.

The former Liberal government introduced, but did not pass, amendments designed to make it easier for police to prosecute prostitutes. They were supported by the Progressive Conservative party.

Mayor Jack Volrich said Tuesday he intends to meet Prime Minister Joe Clark to again ask for changes to the code.

However, both the Vancouver Status of Women and the B.C. Civil Liberties Association applauded the government's decision to leave the criminal code alone.

Winterton said he wants to find out exactly what Flynn said before commenting further.

Charles Fleming, Vancouver's director of legal services, said he does not see how a municipal bylaw could stand up in the courts since the courts have ruled that only the federal government can pass laws dealing with Criminal activity.

Vancouver was unsuccessful in an attempt six years ago to ban beggars from Granville Mall because begging was an activity that once came under the Criminal Code, he said.

Police believe that they have been seriously hampered in attempts to deal with soliciting by a decision of the Supreme Court of Canada that prostitutes must be pressing or persistent in their soliciting.

Half favor Viets

OTTAWA (UPC) — Nearly half those Canadians surveyed in a Gallup Poll favor the admittance of some 50,000 Indochinese refugees to Canada, says Immigration Minister Ron Atkey.

But a substantial number of Canadians (38 per cent) disapprove of the federal government's move to admit thousands of Indochinese "boat people" who were expelled from Vietnam, Atkey said Wednesday in releasing the results of the poll.

"This is probably the greatest support for immigration of refugees ever recorded in a national poll," Atkey said in a prepared statement.

Ruff's report a 'Dickensian' farewell tale

VANCOUVER (CP) — Kathleen Ruff's last report to the British Columbia human rights commission included a Dickensian tale of human rights complaints which were settled with poetic twists.

Ms. Ruff, who resigned her B.C. human rights director's post earlier this week to become the new host of the CBC's Ombudsman television show, explained in an interview Tuesday how two recent cases were settled without resorting to formal boards of inquiry.

Names of those involved were not disclosed because the cases did not go to public hearings.

One complaint came from a 16-year-old girl whose employer was more interested in finding a sexual playmate than a reliable worker.

The teen-ager amswered a newspaper advertisement for an assistant-receptionist at a small city photographic finishing firm. But, said Ms. Ruff, it was obvious the employer was "looking for someone to play with, not to work."

The employee went to the human rights branch with charges of sexual harassment from her boss, including annoying phone calls at home and invitations to spend weekends with him.

The branch, already alerted to the man's technique by another disgruntled job applicant, sent a human rights officer to investigate.

The matter was resolved last week, said Ms. Ruff, when the employer agreed to sign up for psychological counselling and to abide by the human rights code, which prohibits sexual harassment.

She said the employer, in accordance with the settlement, sent a $300 donation to Rape Relief.

In another case, the manager of the only apartment building in a small community on Vancouver Island refused to rent a suite to a family moving into the town.

The human rights branch determined that the building had vacancies and the manager was discriminating against the family because they were of East Indian origin.

The family — an ambulance attendant, his wife and two children — meantime moved in with friends to wait for the outcome of the human rights complaint.

Then the apartment manager collapsed and she required emergency medical aid, Ms. Ruff said, and "the person driving the ambulance and carrying the stretcher was the person she refused to rent to."

The manager recovered and later visited the East Indian family to thank the ambulance attendant and apologize for denying the family a suite.

Ms. Ruff said the manager then invited the family to move into her block and they accepted.

Committees' value stressed

A second report on the operation of the provincial legislature has strongly recommended a greater use of the committee system to streamline the process of government.

The findings of Victoria lawyer and former deputy clerk of the house, George MacMinn, echo recommendations made by Judge Lawrence Eckardt's royal commission on electoral reform.

Both reports suggest a greater use of legislative committees to make the operation of the legislature more efficient.

MacMinn's report is in the hands of Speaker Harvey Schroeder. It is the culmination of a two-year study he was asked to undertake in May, 1977.

He says the current format which sees the full legislature discuss and debate all legislation and public spending should be scrapped in favor of the committee system.

Eckardt and MacMinn feel the system would shorten the length of the legislative sessions allowing MLAs to get on with their other duties.

The smaller forum of a committee would minimize political confrontations and lead to more earnest examination of matters and considerably less politicking, MacMinn suggests.

With committees, two or more arms of the legislative body could proceed with their business simultaneously.

It would also be an effective method of bringing the legislature and the bureaucracy together.

Action promised after child's death

Human Resources Minister Grace McCarthy says she will give top priority to recommendations in a report highly critical of her ministry for its lack of action in the beating death of a 10-month old girl.

McCarthy said she is taking "firm steps" to increase the effectiveness of government child-care programs in the province following the report's release Wednesday.

The report by the attorney-general's ministry criticized the ministry of human resources for not stepping in before the Surrey girl died from a beating in March, 1978.

The report was commissioned after complaints in the legislature that human resources officials were aware of the abuse being inflicted on Charlene Harder for nine months before she died.

Her father, Walter Bayko, was sentenced in April to life imprisonment for second-degree murder in the death.

Report author Brent Parfitt, head of the family and social services division in the attorney-general's ministry, said there was little doubt that "the co-ordination of those involved in the health and welfare of Charlene was sadly lacking."

He also said charges that child abuse was taking place in the Harder-Bayko home were not sufficiently investigated.

Spokesmen for the human resources ministry responded that most of Parfitt's recommendations have already been put into effect.

However, he stressed he found it difficult to criticize the persons involved because without exception they are caring, people who personally feel responsible for the baby's death.

Parfitt said in his report that human resources officials, public health nurses, hospital nurses, physicians and the police suspected the child was being abused but none were certain.

"These people (Charlene's mother and natural father) gave misinformation, concealed their whereabouts, gave false undertakings and tried to avoid confrontations with those in the helping profession, often going on the offensive, charging harassment," Parfitt said.

In retrospect, the parents' behavior should have aroused suspicion, Parfitt said. He said the parents seemed to have been given the benefit of the doubt when incidents of abuse surfaced.

Parfitt said that while various individuals had contact with the child and the parents over a period of months, there was no co-ordination of their findings nor any attempts for the one person or organization to contact each other or cross-check information.

The child was treated at Surrey hospital for a broken leg, which her mother said occurred when she fell out of a cot. Subsequent visits aroused the suspicion of health workers.

Parfitt said the only way to prevent similar occurences would involve restructuring and co-ordinating the entire child-abuse reporting system.

Nurses, hospital staff and the public should be advised of their statutory duty to report child-abuse suspicions, he said, adding Crown counsel should consider laying charges against those who do not report.

Moslems observe traditional fast

Zohra Chaudhry gets up at 3 a.m. to make breakfast for her husband and four children.

She is one of about 100 Vancouver Island Moslems who are fasting from before dawn until twilight during the lunar month of Ramaden.

As well as fasting, they are abstaining from smoking and sex, trying to do good things for other people and praying five times a day.

The Koran says:

"Oh ye who believe! Fasting is prescribed to you as it was prescribed to those before you that you may learn self-restraint."

Each believer has a slightly different interpretation of what the Koran has prescribed.

To Zohra Chaudhry who came here eight years ago from Uganda, it means helping someone.

She says, "You have to be very very careful. No lies. Even for some small thing. You start with your family. Tell them something about your religion.

"In my country, it meant helping the poor. But it's difficult here because I don't know who needs help."

To Yousef Ebrahim, a professor at the University of Victoria, it is a time when he quits smoking. That and the fasting make him feel rejuvenated.

"It makes me feel really good."

But more than that, it is a time when Moslems review their behavior towards others.

"It is to remind people to live that way during the other months. It reminds them to live an honest life, to treat people kindly. It's basic human decency," says Ebrahim.

The fasting is also meant to remind Moslems of the poor people of the world who don't have enough to eat.

After the month of fasting there will be feast.

On August 24, the Moslems of Vancouver Island will gather for Eid-ul-fiter, a day of celebration and rejoicing.

New data surfaces on Skagit

Environment Minister Rafe Mair said Wednesday talks scheduled for this month with Seattle City Light on the future of the Skagit Valley in B.C. were postponed because of new information he received.

The U.S. utility wants to raise the Ross Dam on the Skagit River, a move which would flood the valley about 160 kilometres east of Vancouver.

Mair said that a day or two before the meeting, which had been scheduled for last Friday, he received a report on the possible options available and he now needs a clear mandate from cabinet before taking the next step in negotiations.

RT. HON. JOHN GEORGE DIEFENBAKER . . . 1895-1979

Dief dead at 83

OTTAWA (CP) — John Diefenbaker, 83, the former prime minister who became a living legend, died today and will be given the traditional honors of a state funeral.

He was found dead in the study of his Rockcliffe Park home about two hours after getting up as usual about 5 a.m. Ottawa time. He died with some parliamentary papers still in his hands, apparently of a sudden heart attack, his secretary said.

"I think it was the way he would have wanted to go," said Keith Martin, his executive assistant for the last 10 years.

After establishing a national reputation as a civil rights advocate and courtroom defence attorney, Diefenbaker was elected prime minister in 1957, swept the country in 1958 preaching a vision of Northern development and suffered defeat in 1963 with dissension in his cabinet.

Though defeated, he never retired.

Funeral plans are incomplete, but the body will lie in state Friday in the Centre Block on Parliament Hill. The House of Commons was Diefenbaker's political and spiritual home for nearly 40 years.

Martin said a state funeral service is likely to be held here after the body has lain in state for a couple of days. It may then be taken to Prince Albert, Sask., by train.

The funeral train would be appropriate, over the route the old political warrior travelled as a young man in an upper berth, or as prime minister in a private car. He loved to watch the wide sweep of the prairies roll by his train windows.

Diefenbaker was active to the end of a political career that began in Saskatchewan in the 1920s, unsuccessfully at first. He was first elected to the Commons in 1940 and was successful at every general election that followed, including this spring's.

Martin said he died still clutching some papers relating to this fall's parliamentary session, the first that would see his Conservative party back in power with Joe Clark as its leader and prime minister. Clark was at one time a Diefenbaker aide.

Diefenbaker's den in his modest Rockcliffe home is crammed with mementos of Sir John A. Macdonald, the first prime minister, which Diefenbaker collected for many years.

He had lunch Wednesday at the National Press Club, and on Saturday appeared in an interview on the CTV network program Question Period, expressing concern about national unity.

"I'm greatly concerned about my country," he said. "I have never seen it as divided as today. Suspicion, fear, all those things that deny unity are present."

Diefenbaker, who was twice married, had no children. A brother, Elmer, predeceased him.

Diefenbaker's proudest legislative achievement was unquestionably the Bill of Rights, passed in 1960. He wrote it in terms which would apply to all parliamentary enactments, past and future, though it was — and is — itself an act that can be amended.

In retirement, he described the Bill of Rights as "a shield to protect and a spear to defend" fundamental freedoms in Canada.

He also introduced simultaneous translation of debates in French and English in Parliament, and made bank cheques legal in either language.

Diefenbaker was found dead by Archie McQueen of Hamilton, Ont., who had worked with the former prime minister on a volunteer basis during the summer months for some years.

He was proud of his prairie pioneer upbringing and his home constituency of Lake Centre and later Prince Albert in Saskatchewan. But Diefenbaker was born Sept. 18, 1895, at Neustadt, Ont. His father was a civil servant who moved West when John George Diefenbaker was eight.

The former prime minister died one month and two days short of his 84th birthday.

He had several illnesses in recent years, including pneumonia this summer which he said later had been critical and brought him near death. But he also could recover quickly, and in his political hey-day could campaign for days with only short cat-naps.

A week before his death, he was still talking about making trips to China and to the North Pole. In his time he was the country's most-travelled prime minister, making a round-the-world tour of Commonwealth countries in 1958.

His first wife, Edna, whom he married in 1929, died in 1951 of leukemia. She was little known to the public.

His second wife, Olive, was a widow and friend of his youth, whom he married in 1953. A warm-hearted woman of almost queenly bearing who campaigned with Diefenbaker in a cloth coat because furs would look ostentatious, she died Dec. 22, 1976.

Queen mourns

Times News Services

LONDON — Queen Elizabeth said today she is greatly saddened to hear of the death of former Canadian prime minister John Diefenbaker.

"Canada has lost a man of great stature," the Queen said in a tribute issued from Buckingham Palace.

As the Queen and Canadian leaders reacted to the passing of Diefenbaker, flags here at the parliament buildings and city hall were lowered to half mast today in his memory.

In Quebec, however, flags on government buildings were to remain at full mast, the provincial government announced.

"The policy of the government of Quebec on lowering flags to half-mast dictates that we follow international custom and lower our flags only upon the death of an actual head of state or government," a protocol officer said.

Meanwhile, in Ottawa, the former prime minister was described as "a great human force who changed the history of our country and became a symbol of the resilient strength of the Canadian individual," by Prime Minister Joe Clark.

And Opposition Leader Pierre Trudeau paid tribute saying Diefenbaker was a man with "a very vigorous sense of human rights and individual liberties."

Trudeau said Diefenbaker had a tremendous personal following because of his ability to communicate with people and create bonds.

Gov.-Gen. Edward Schreyer responded to news of Diefenbaker's death by saying that all Canadians will feel a sense of loss.

Octuplets born to Italian woman

NAPLES, Italy (AP) — A 29-year-old Naples woman on fertility treatment gave birth prematurely today to octuplets, five girls and three boys. One girl died hours later and a doctor said the seven other babies were seriously underweight.

Doctors at Naples' Hospital of the Incurable said the babies' weights ranged from 14 ounces to 2.3 pounds. A doctor said he had "some hope" the two largest of the infants would survive,

The mother was identified as Mrs. Pasqualina Chianese. She was reported to have delivered six children three years ago, all of whom died a few hours after birth. She was said to be physically well, but afraid of losing all the infants. Mrs. Chianese and her husband, Stefano, an insurance company employee, live in a Naples suburb.

The previous highest number of surviving children in a multiple birth was six — which the Guinness Book of World Records says occurred twice, in Sydney, Australia, in 1971 and in Cape Town, South Africa, in 1974. Guinness officials in London said they based their multiple birth records on infants that survived their first birthdays.

Promises cost church $2M

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — In a case lawyers say may be a landmark — and a warning to religious institutions — a jury awarded a Portland woman more than $2 million because, for her, the promises of a better life through Scientology didn't come true.

Julie Titchbourne, 21, said church courses she took in 1975 did not live up to claims they would help her with her college classwork, develop her creativity and raise her IQ test scores.

Her lawyer said the decision Wednesday is a warning for new religions or cults.

"At least in Oregon, we've served notice on all people that if your're going to deal with our young people, you'd better do it fairly and honestly," said lawyer Garry McMurry.

A spokesman for the Scientologists said she is unsure what effect the verdict will have on the church.

Young quits UN post

By PHIL GAILEY
Washington Star

WASHINGTON — Andrew Young has resigned as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, saying he would rather leave his post than change his controversial style of diplomacy.

The 47-year-old diplomat handed his resignation to President Carter Wednesday afternoon at the White House one day after he was reprimanded for breaching U.S. policy by meeting secretly with a representative of the Palestine Liberation Organization and then giving the State Department a false account of what had happened.

The unrepentant Young hinted today he might meet again with the PLO's UN observer, Zehdi Labib Terzi, before leaving the UN post.

Young also said he would not be surprised if he had been spied on by Israeli agents.

He was asked specifically whether, as president of the UN Security Council for the month of August, he would meet again with Terzi if the Palestinian asked.

"It would be unconscionable to refuse to see somebody as president of the Security Council," he replied.

Pressed later for a clarification, he said he would meet with anyone wanting to see him as long as that person were qualified. Terzi might be considered qualified because the Council regularly grants him the right to address it during debates on the Palestinian issue.

It became clear today that unless he is immediately replaced, and President Carter has said he will act with due care and deliberation in naming a replacement, Young may still be the chief U.S. delegate to the UN, and therefore Council president, next Thursday, when the Council is scheduled to resume its debate over the Palestinians and resolutions to support their drive for statehood.

Young's meeting with the PLO representative touched off protests by Israeli leaders who accused the United States of changing its policy toward the PLO. Adding to Israeli jitters about U.S. policy was the State Department's acknowledgment Wednesday that Milton A. Wolf, the U.S. ambassador to Austria, had had three unauthorized meetings recently with a PLO official.

The PLO official reportedly contacted Wolf most recently in an effort to clarify that organization's position on an issue that the State Department would not reveal. The department said

Scotia mortgage rates increased

TORONTO (CP) — Less than a month after banks and trust companies raised mortgage rates, the Bank of Nova Scotia announced Wednesday further rate increases of one-quarter and one-half percentage points.

Other mortgage lenders, however, did not rush to follow Nova Scotia's lead.

Spokesmen for the Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce, the Royal Bank, the Bank of Montreal and the Toronto Dominion Bank said rates are under review.

The Bank of Nova Scotia's new rate on five-year closed conventional mortgages is 12 per cent. Closed mortgages levy penalties for payment before the mortgage term is up.

The rate at most other institutions is 11¾ per cent.

The other new rates are 12 per cent for three-year closed conventional mortgages, 12½ per cent for three-year open conventional mortgages and 11¾ per cent for five-year closed mortgages insured under the National Housing Act.

J. M. Brooks, president of Kinross Mortgage Corp., said the company is not about to raise mortgage rates again. Kinross is the mortgage affiliate of the Commerce bank.

And William Thornhill, assistant vice-president of Canada Trustco Mortgage Co., said the company does not plan to increase rates again until there is another increase in the Bank of Canada's rate.

Last month's increases in interest and mortgage rates came after the Bank of Canada raised its lending rate, a signal for other financial institutions to raise their rates to help support a lagging Canadian dollar.

The current Canadian prime loan rate is 12.5 per cent.

But some currency traders said increases in loan rates by U.S. banks may force Canadian interest and mortgage rates up.

Killer typhoon wreaks havoc

SHANGHAI, China (UPI) — Typhoon Irving, which has already ravaged the Philippines "rice bowl" area with its 160 km/h winds, headed today for the world's largest metropolis, Shanghai.

Chinese authorities issued an urgent warning to Shanghai and the surrounding area and residents braced themselves as wind-driven rain buffeted the area.

A radio broadcast warned residents in Shanghai, Jiangsu and Zhejiang provinces to be prepared for torrential rains.

Shanghai city has a population of 12 million and its entire metropolitan area numbers some 30 million.

Irving sent flood water rampaging through the Philipines "rice bowl" region today killing at least six people and forcing 67,500 persons to flee to higher ground, the Red Cross said.

Low-lying areas in 26 towns in the rice-producing central Luzon plain just north of Manila were flooded.

Weathermen said Irving, on an erratic course in the Pacific Ocean, sucked in a rain-laden monsoon.

The rains triggered landslides on the hairpin curves snaking up to Baguio city, isolating the mountain resort north of Manila.

Floods raced through the lowlands, breaking dikes and inflicting heavy damage to agricultural crops.

Last yacht reported safe

Times News Services

PLYMOUTH, England — With a new storm menacing and the death toll risen to 17, the last of the missing yachts from the Fastnet Race has been spotted and all hands reported safe.

Two men were still missing and feared drowned as high winds gusting to gale force were forecast today for the area off southwest coast of England where a freak summer storm Tuesday created havoc for more than 300 racing yachts making their way here from Ireland's Fastnet Rock in Admiral's Cup competition.

Rescue officials said today the lighthouse keeper of the Fastnet Rock reported all eight crew aboard the 38-foot British Kalisana were safe. The Royal Navy was checking the report.

More than 130 other sailors were plucked to safety from life rafts and dismasted craft in the nation's biggest air-sea rescue operation since the Second World War, spanning 52,000 square kilometres of ocean.

The final official total had 21 yachts sunk or abandoned — an estimated loss of more than $6 million.

Lloyd's of London refused to say what the insurance on the lost and damaged boats would total, but one broker said the bill come in at $9 million.

"No one who has been through an experience of that kind would wish to go through it again," said former British prime minister Edward Heath, who arrived back safely Wednesday evening aboard his yacht Morning Cloud IV.

Meanwhile, some yachtsmen, including American Ted Turner the dapper Atlanta millionaire who won the Fastnet portion of the Admiral's Cup competition aboard the sloop Tenacious, blamed lax safety standards for yachting's worst disaster.

Turner, 40, said many fellow yachtsmen have sacrificed stability for speed with lighter boats that could not ride out such a storm. A race organizer disagreed, but acknowledged officials were studying safety rules.

The Diefenbaker Years

He was proud of the niche he carved in Canadian history and nothing he did ever seemed to be in half measure

Canadian Press

As a history buff, John George Diefenbaker was proudly aware of the historical niche he carved in 1958 when, with rolling oratory directed at "my fellow Canadians," he won the biggest parliamentary majority in Canada's history.

Nine years later in a contrary context he said: "I am still making history." He had just suffered the humiliation of being toppled from the leadership of his Conservative party, placing fifth on the first ballot.

Nothing Diefenbaker did ever seemed to be in half measure, whether as prime minister from 1957 to 1963 or in opposition.

And during more than three mercurial decades in Parliament, the intense Prairie orator stimulated an all-or-nothing reaction. He was fought and fawned upon, loved and loathed as he roared through Canada's political history, turning defeats into victory and transforming victories into defeat.

"When anyone counts me out of the way, I count myself right back in again," he once proclaimed.

Blazing blue eyes afire, threatening forefinger stabbing the air, Diefenbaker was at his combative best when under political attack or sensing what he regarded as an injustice.

Others made mistakes — on many occasions — in predicting his political demise. But so did he.

"My course has come to an end," he said when the 1967 leadership convention ousted him from power a decade after he led the Conservatives out of the political wilderness to take over the government of Canada.

Later he said it was unlikely his voice would again be heard in the House of Commons, where it had thundered since 1940.

But he was wrong

But he was wrong on both counts. Quietly licking his wounds, the old warrior thought seriously of dropping out of Parliament when the 1968 general election was called. But these thoughts were short-lived.

He went back to Prince Albert "among the people" and plunged into another campaign, this time free from the rigors of coast-to-coast travel a leader must endure. He appeared revitalized as he walked along dusty main streets, shaking hands and dropping into stores to greet workers on a first-name basis.

"I don't campaign; I just go out and meet the people."

The chief went back to Ottawa with an 8,871-vote majority. No longer prime minister, nor even a designated party critic for any department, he remained a dominating figure. Observers talked about Diefenbaker's "last" session and a national magazine wrote about "the last hurrah," but the curtain was far from falling.

It was clear he did not need a specific government department to criticize; he had his own projects. It was not long before the Trudeau Liberal government felt the heat about its alleged indifferent attitude toward royalty and other traditions.

Diefenbaker's unrelenting attack resulted in reversal of a policy that would have substituted the word "Police" for "RCMP", on cars and buildings.

"This government won't be satisfied until all semblance of royalty is in the garbage can," he declared.

He became the self-appointed protector of the RCMP, the old military regiments, the royal coat of arms on mail boxes and vehicles, and any other historic symbol he felt was in danger.

Old fire returned

And gradually, the old fire returned. The accusing finger was stabbing the air again and speaking invitations poured in from across the country.

By the time the 1972 federal election rolled around, there was no doubt that the Prince Albert Conservative would run once again. This time he led his nearest opponent by more than 10,000 votes.

Going back to his front-row seat in the Commons, Diefenbaker picked up where he left off, blasting the Trudeau government in public and taking the odd swipe at his own party in private. His was a one-man show, without benefit of caucus discussions, designated questions or party disciplines, and he continued to be one of the most effective MPs in the House.

His attitude toward Robert Stanfield, his successor as party leader, remained politely cool. Stanfield responded with delicate respect for the old chief, who continued to have a solid group of admirers on the back benches.

There was no mention of his quitting Parliament when, on Dec. 22, 1976, his second wife — the former Olive Palmer, a widowed schoolteacher — died at home in the exclusive Ottawa suburb of Rockcliffe. Diefenbaker had relied on her increasingly to jog his memory and repeat anecdotes that he missed as his hearing slowly failed.

He cried when she died, and his eyes would mist when people spoke of her. But he said he promised her he would continue in public life, and after a brief vacation in Barbados where he had written part of his three-volume set of memoirs, he was back in his place in Parliament, and back at his old routine.

He continued to command attention in the Commons, although in his latest years he was perhaps regarded more as a historical curiosity than a force to be reckoned with. Government MPs who at one time trembled when the Chief thundered, took to grinning when he spoke.

His power dwindled

Diefenbaker's power within his own party also dwindled.

When Conservatives chose Joe Clark as their leader at a February, 1976, convention, Diefenbaker sided in the end with the runner-up, Quebec MP Claude Wagner. Clark treated him as a grand old man, but the two weren't close. Clark was more than 40 years his junior.

As Diefenbaker's power waned, his list of honors grew. He was appointed Companion of Honor by the Queen, on Jan. 1, 1976, one of a select group of 65 distinguished Commonwealth citizens.

Plaques in his honor were placed in the Commons lobby, in schools, in public buildings. A lake formed by the Saskatchewan River Dam at Cutbank, Sask., was named after him. University of Saskatchewan in Saskatoon — recipient of most of his historical papers — devoted a memorial centre. His list of honorary degrees, awards and achievements filled two full pages in the parliamentary guide.

During his long and turbulent political career, he rose from the back benches to lead the Conservatives into office in 1957 after his party had been 22 years in opposition.

Tossed out of office six years later, he fought for a comeback, never making it, but nevertheless preventing the Liberals of Lester Pearson from gaining a clear majority in the elections of 1963 and 1965.

Few knew him intimately. Even fewer understood him fully.

Political setbacks

Those qualities carried John Diefenbaker through a succession of political setbacks, starting in the 1920s, that would have stopped anyone less dedicated to winning a place in public life.

He was defeated twice in federal elections, twice in Saskatchewan provincial elections and twice in early bids for leadership of the federal Conservatives. But he had decided as a boy that he would dedicate himself to public life and he persisted in his ambition.

He was born Sept. 18, 1895, at Neustadt in Grey County, Ont., but grew up from the age of eight in Saskatchewan during the boom days of Prairie settlement.

As a youth who watched the mass influx of European settlers early this century, he learned first-hand about the problems of minority groups.

In his first parliamentary speech, he urged Canadian citizenship instead of British citizenship for all Canadians. Finally, Prime Minister Mackenzie King agreed, and in 1946 the Canadian Citizenship Act was passed.

AN AVID FISHERMAN, Diefenbaker lines up beside three coho salmon he caught during a 1977 stop in Campbell River.

That became a source of pride to Diefenbaker, whose great-grandfather had emigrated from Holland around 1815 to settle at York — now Toronto. The family name was originally Diefenbacker but grandfather George Diefenbacker, a noted carriage-maker in western Ontario, dropped the "c" during the 1890s.

His father was a school teacher who at the start of the century moved his family frequently. In 1903 he finally moved to a school near Fort Carlton in western Saskatchewan.

When John was 14 his father settled in Saskatoon where John and younger brother Elmer could get better schooling. The father became land titles clerk and later, for 28 years, a federal customs officer.

John went on to acquire a master of arts degree at University of Saskatchewan in 1916 at the age of 20 and then went overseas as a lieutenant in the 196th Western University Battalion. The next year Diefenbaker — the first veteran to become Canadian prime minister — was injured in France and was invalided back to Canada.

Two years later he graduated in law and began practice in the village of Wakaw, Sask. On his 24th birthday he won his first jury trial at Humboldt defending a man accused of shooting his neighbor.

Subsequently Diefenbaker built up a reputation as one of the West's most successful criminal lawyers.

A move from Wakaw to Prince Albert in 1924 not only marked the start of major successes as a lawyer but also gave him new scope for political ambitions.

Twice, in 1925 and 1926, he ran unsuccessfully as federal candidate in Prince Albert. The second time he almost lost his election deposit in a contest against Liberal chieftain Mackenzie King, trailing 4,838 votes to 8,933. In 1929 and 1938 he lost, by narrow margins, attempts at election to the Saskatchewan legislature. Between 1937 and 1940 he was provincial Conservative leader when his party had no members in the legislature.

Married twice

He married, in 1929, Edna Mae Brower, but they had no children. His first wife died early in 1951 and on Dec. 8, 1953, he married Olive Palmer.

During the 22 years of Liberal administration, there had only been two all-out Commons battles in which public sentiment had been stirred against the government.

The first in 1955 was over the attempt to get unlimited renewal of the wide emergency powers available under the Defence Production Act.

The second in 1956 was the Liberal move to help finance an American-controlled company's construction of the natural gas pipeline from Alberta to Montreal.

Faced by a determined Opposition filibuster, the government resorted to unprecedented use of the debate-limiting device of closure to get the pipeline measure passed.

Diefenbaker had played a prominent though not a leading role in both Commons battles but as leader, he stumped the country in the election campaign of 1957 with the cry that return of the Liberals could spell the end of parliamentary freedoms.

On June 10, 1957, the voters toppled the Liberals. Prime Minister Louis St. Laurent resigned to make way for a Conservative government that nevertheless could command only a minority 110 of the 265 Commons seats. The first Diefenbaker administration began June 21, 1957, followed by the March 31, 1958, election which sent 208 Conservatives to Ottawa, up to the time the greatest number of MPs for any government since Confederation.

In the throne speech at the opening of Parliament in 1958 the Progressive Conservative government proposed enactment of a bill of rights on subjects within federal jurisdiction and passed it two years later.

Diefenbaker repeatedly expressed concern over the extent of U.S. control in various segments of the economy.

Foreign investment was welcome, he said, but it must expect to serve Canadian purposes.

Trouble mounted

At first slowly, then with increasing speed, difficulties mounted. First there were uproars over cutting off manufacture of the Arrow jet fighter and changing the basis of federal subsidies to Newfoundland.

Looking back over the Diefenbaker government years, political observers generally regard his handling of the Arrow as the first dent in the administration's armor.

He announced in September, 1958, that the Bomarc-B missile was being put into the North American Air Defence (NORAD) system with installations near La Macaza, Que., and North Bay, Ont., and that the Arrow project would be "reviewed." The review really meant the end of the Arrow, but few — particularly aircraft workers — believed it.

Development work on the revolutionary supersonic jet fighter had been started by A. V, Roe Ltd., under the previous Liberal government. Expenditures had mounted to $500 million and more was needed.

In February, 1959, he announced in the Commons the project was being cancelled. The final decision came as a blow to 13,000 aircraft workers at Malton, near Toronto. The aircraft industry as a whole faced uncertainty for years. Many of the country's best aeronautical engineers moved to the U.S.

After two years in office, there was mounting criticism that Diefenbaker ran a one-man show.

Diefenbaker, described by his Western friends and supporters as a Prairie radical by nature, had no sympathy with big business and little understanding of the fine points of economic or monetary policy. He was inclined to blame the economists for not curing the country's ills, instead of listening to and weighing their advice.

While Governor James Coyne of the Bank of Canada was calling for belt-tightening attitudes to see Canada through its unusual difficulties and to guard against future dangers, Diefenbaker and his cabinet were preaching expansion.

The two conflicting policies led inevitably to battle, but it was fought more on a question of principle than of policy. Which was to be in command — the Bank of Canada with its powerful and independent role in managing the country's money or the political leaders of the government in charge of taxation and answerable to the voters? The government tried to fire the bank chief but stubbed its toe.

Diefenbaker left the generalship of this 1961 battle to his minister of finance, Donald Fleming; but played his part in a major skirmish in questioning Coyne's propriety in presiding over a bank meeting which increased the retirement pensions for bank governors.

A tactical move also was Diefenbaker's responsibility in refusing to allow a Commons committee study of a bill to declare Coyne's job vacant. He and his ministers spoke bitingly of a Liberal brain trust and establishment in the civil service, and thereby lost support of large numbers of junior civil servants as well.

The Coyne ouster bill was shelved by the Senate, with its Liberal majority composed of appointees of previous Liberal governments. Coyne thereupon resigned, in July, 1961.

Tories lost heavily

All these circumstances were grist for the Opposition political mill.

In April, 1962, Diefenbaker set the date for a general election in June, charging the Opposition with obstruction and delaying tactics in the Commons.

Pearson said Diefenbaker was saying in effect that he could no longer govern with 203 Conservatives in a 265-seat House "unless the Opposition gave up the exercise of its cherished rights of carrying out its duties."

Diefenbaker fully expected to lose some seats.

But in the voting, the Conservatives lost five middle-string and junior ministers, and had its majority control cut to minority status in the Commons. The result: 116 Conservatives, 100 Liberals, 49 others.

When Diefenbaker met Parliament that fall it was with a badly shaken cabinet and party, a country facing complex and nearly unfathomable economic difficulties, and an Opposition whose appetites had been whetted by electoral gains.

Brewing in the background was the nuclear arms issue — whether U.S. nuclear warheads should be brought on to Canadian soil to arm the Bomarcs and RCAF jets already acquired to carry them. In a little more than a month the issue boiled up to explosive force, and the Diefenbaker government was defeated in the Commons.

On Jan. 3, 1963, Gen. Lauris Norstad, retiring supreme commander of NATO forces in Europe, said in a departing press conference in Ottawa that Canada was committed to accepting nuclear warheads for its NATO forces, and wouldn't be fulfilling the commitment until it did so.

The opposition Liberal and Social Credit groups proposed non-confidence motions. Harkness resigned as defence minister, saying his views in support of acquiring nuclear warheads were irreconcilable with those of Diefenbaker. The next day the government was defeated, Parliament was dissolved and the new election called for April 8, 1963.

But the political tide was in fact running with the Liberals and against the Diefenbaker candidates. Voting on April 8, 1963, gave Pearson's Liberals 129 seats in the 265-seat House — the largest group, but short of a majority. The Conservatives slipped to 95. Diefenbaker and his government resigned April 22.

But Diefenbaker began to "count myself right back in again" and set about to rebuild his fortunes and regain the prime ministership.

He survived a February, 1964, attempt to unseat him as party head but another crisis was on the horizon.

It came in the 1965 election campaign in which the Conservatives prevented the Liberals from winning a majority. Although supporters rallied around the 70-year-old Diefenbaker, who won his ninth personal electoral victory, dissatisfaction with his leadership became more vocal. Party members began to rally around Dalton Camp, the national Tory president, who began stumping the country calling for a leadership review.

At a bitter convention in Ottawa in November, 1966, Camp's forces won the day.

The results of the first ballot were: Robert Stanfield 519; former Manitoba premier Duff Roblin 349; former justice minister E. Davie Fulton 343; former trade minister George Hees 295; Diefenbaker 271.

His support dwindling, he scribbled out his withdrawal notice. It was all over.

Ardent fisherman

An ardent fisherman, he once said his favorite sport was going after lake trout in northern Saskatchewan lakes with light tackle. After he became prime minister he found a fishing spot in the Gatineau Hills a few miles from the capital where he could get away for a few hours of relaxation occasionally.

The year-book at University of Saskatchewan, when he graduated, predicted he would become Opposition leader in the Commons.

He fulfilled that prophecy for only six months in 1957 before he was able to go it one better.

Transition House: where battered wives start building new life

By LORRAINE LOCHERTY
Times Staff

After six years in a logging camp 90 miles from civilization and steady abuse by an alcoholic husband, Janet was ready to call it quits.

She wanted to leave her husband, but was a virtual prisoner — he had the car keys and the money and she had the welfare of her three children to think about.

Ironically, a severe beating he gave her provided the chance to escape. Shortly after she entered hospital with a concussion, bruises and a broken rib, he was admitted to a detoxification centre in North Vancouver. After her release Janet (not her real name) gave the house a last ritual cleanup, piled her kids, dog and cat into the car, and took off.

Since she couldn't expect any emotional or financial help from disapproving relatives, Janet headed to Victoria's Transition House.

It turned out to be the best decision of her life, Janet says, because after a week at the house she felt better about herself than she had in a long time.

Transition House is a shelter for mentally and physically abused women and their children. It's in Fairfield but the address is not advertised to prevent unwanted visits from husbands.

Its aim is to provide a haven where women can pull their lives back together, and get moral support and counselling.

The house is one of three operating in B.C. and takes referrals from other part of Vancouver Island.

Most of the referrals are made by police, the human resources ministry and community agencies like Crisis Line.

Last year the 12-bed house had a 50 to 70-per-cent occupancy rate each month. But since Christmas it's been a full house and the staff constantly turns people away.

Victoria needs another Transition House to handle the overload, says Sheila Waest, working as a summer public relations co-ordinator for the house.

One reason for its sudden popularity could be increasing awareness by women they don't have to put up with abuse.

"Women are talking about it more. Once they realize they aren't alone — that's the biggest step."

It's a greater problem than most people realize and not confined to the lower economic strata. Doctors, lawyers and businessmen are just as liable to abuse their families as men on welfare.

"We've had Corvettes as well as bicycles parked out in front of the house," Sheila says.

Most victims are between the ages of 20 and 45; but women as young as 16 and older than 65 also stay there.

About 60 per cent of them are suffering from some form of physical abuse, ranging from bruises to broken bones and stab wounds. Others have been battered emotionally and can't stand to live in the same house with their husbands.

But despite the diverse backgrounds, they all feel guilty, inadequate, and insecure. The emotional beatings they receive drive out all self-respect and confidence.

"After you live with that (abuse) for a certain period of time, you start to believe it's your fault," Waest says.

"You become just as sick as the men."

Many women balk at leaving home because they have young children to support, or because they are penniless and don't know about Transition House.

"A lot of women will stay in a situation because there is food on the table and a roof over their heads," staff member Wendy Buck explained.

Buck, a full-time staff member for about 15 months, said the last straw is often threats or actual violence to their children.

She estimates about 25 per cent of the women who stay at the house eventually return to their husbands. The rest are helped to find housing, jobs and legal counsel.

Since most women decide not to prosecute for one reason or other, the men responsible for brutal assaults against their wives usually get off scott-free.

Buck describes the problem as a "vicious circle" — wives who are beaten by their husbands often come from homes where they were beaten by their fathers. Boys who are abused grow up to abuse their wives.

The philosophy of Transition House has changed a lot since it started six years ago. Staff members are trying hard to convey their change in attitude to the public and their professional contacts.

In the beginning, before they were given the B.C. Buildings Corporation-owned house in Fairfield, the facility shared a building with feminist action groups and the staff had an aggressive militant stance.

As a result it acquired a negative reputation with male professional people such as doctors, and lawyers and police.

Today men are only allowed to visit the house by appointment, but no longer considered the enemy. The attitude of staff has mellowed considerably.

Nonetheless, recent government funding cutbacks don't make the going any easier.

Transition House survives on a federal secretary of state grant of $13 per bed a day.

All expenses, including food and salaries for the three full-time people are drawn from the grant. Three temporary staff for public relations and child care work have been hired on summer employment grants.

Women are encouraged to stick to their usual daily schedule. The staff arrives at 9:30 a.m. and leave at 10:30 p.m., but during the rest of the time the residents are on their own.

A weekly meeting is held to allocate chores such as grocery shopping and for airing grievences and just talking. It's not uncommon for these sessions to last until 4 in the morning.

Living in close quarters with a group of strange women and their children, who are suffering emotionally and physically, is no easy task and staff members find themselves refereeing the odd blow-up.

After an intitial screening interview — women on drugs or suffering severe alcohol or mental problems are referred to other agencies — the guest is admitted and left alone for the first couple of days.

She is invited to consider the house her home for a month, sometimes longer, depending on her situation. During that time she receives counselling if she wants it, and the solace of others who are in the same situation.

Man held after third robbery

A 22-year-old man was arrested early today after the city's third robbery this week.

City detectives said a man walking on Douglas near Francis was accosted about 4 a.m. and forced to give up his watch and $40 cash.

The property was recovered, police said.

On the previous night three people in a car at Beacon Hill lookout were confronted by a man with a knife who took two wristwatches and fled into the bush.

Three young men were arrested after a pedestrian was robbed of $65 on Douglas two nights ago.

Ask the Times

Q. I would like to know how voting in elections works in Canada. How many votes are necessary to elect a candidate. Are more votes necessary for a candidate running in densely populated areas? G.V.E.

A. The candidate with the most votes wins whether the area is rural or urban. If there are three candidates running in one riding, and one has one vote more than the others, he wins.

Q. Where is the Somerset mountain range on Vancouver Island? E.N.

A. Roughly between Bamfield and the Klanawa River on the west coast.

Gardom asked to intervene in centre fight

Attorney-General Garde Gardom has been asked to intervene in the Tillicum shopping centre dispute between the Capital Regional Board and Saanich.

The request came Wednesday from Victoria MLA Charles Barber, the NDP's municipal affairs critic.

Barber asked Gardom to have the dispute handled under the Constitutional Questions Determination Act.

He said the act provides a way to settle the dispute quickly and at far less cost.

Under the act the cabinet can refer the dispute to the court of appeal or a judge.

"Such a quarrel undermines morale and co-operation on other fronts," said Barber. "It diverts staff time. It destabilizes working relationships among local governments in Greater Victoria. It does no good thing for anyone."

Gardom is in Vancouver and has not yet seen Barber's letter but a ministry spokesman said the letter has been referred to the ministry's constitutional staff for comment.

At a regional plan management committee meeting Wednesday, Metchosin director Mac Tipton said being "nice guys" at the Capital Regional District level isn't going to solve the shopping centre hassle.

"Going on the old boy system isn't going to solve anything," he said.

"The question is does the regional district have the power or not to approve or disapprove regional shopping centres?

"We had the old boy system and Saanich chose to ignore it," he said, adding that Saanich and other communities planning such centres as Tillicum must get board approval.

Tipton was responding to Saanich Mayor Mel Couvelier, who said: "Regional government will only succeed to the extent that goodwill and spirit of co-operation exists between the member municipalities."

Couvelier told the committee the board did not have the authority under the Municipal Act to veto shopping centre applications.

He said the regional plan must be amended so that member municipalities have the power to enforce regional shopping centre regulations.

Committee chairman Jim Campbell noted that a letter from Saanich solicitor Chris Nation indicated a desire by the municipality to retain control over shopping centres.

The letter, referring to recommended amendments to the regional plan which Nation said he considered legally unsound, continued: "Firstly, the section appears to once again give the regional board the power to approve individual applications for new regional centres. The existing regional plan does the same thing, although in more explicit terms, and it has always been our contention that the board does not have the power to do so."

"That certainly is what it was intended to do," Campbell said.

Couvelier clashed with Campbell after the latter said the mayor appeared to believe the regional board should not have the power to screen shopping centre applications.

Couvelier said he did not say should not.

"I said you don't have it," he told Campbell.

The committee finally agreed the regional planning department should draw up in bylaw form definitions of shopping centres contained in a joint-agreement between Saanich and regional planners.

The Tillicum developers, Cal Investments Ltd. and Tillicum Holdings Ltd., brought a motion in chambers today, asking that they be included as defendants with Saanich in the suit the CRD is bringing against the municipality.

'Had to be on toes to work with Dief'

Two Victorians who once served in John Diefenbaker's cabinet had words of praise today for The Chief.

Maj.-Gen. George Pearkes, 1268 Tattersal, said Diefenbaker was a great Conservative and a great Canadian.

He also did a lot for Western Canada, said Pearkes, 91, who served as federal defence minister from 1957 to 1960.

"Diefenbaker was a great Conservative and he did a lot for his country," said the former B.C. lieutenant-governor.

Gordon Churchill, who held several cabinet posts from 1957 to 1963, said Diefenbaker was one of the great men in Canada's political history.

"It was quite a privilege to know and work with him," said Churchill, who lives at 202-140 Douglas.

"He was a very keen-minded, intelligent person.

"It was stimulating to work with him because you had to be on your toes."

Churchill, 80, said the quality he admired most in Diefenbaker was his courage in the face of adversity.

"I was with him on so many occasions when things weren't going well. But he never gave up."

Diefenbaker also had a wonderful sense of humor which stood him in good stead when times got tough, he said.

Churchill was appointed minister of trade and commerce in June, 1957, minister of veteran affairs in 1960 and then served as minister of national defence from February to April, 1963.

He said he spent three days with Diefenbaker at his home in Prince Albert, Sask. in May of this year during the time of the federal election.

"He and I had a thousand laughs," Churchill said.

Diefenbaker had a common touch, he said, and was just as comfortable talking on the street corners with people in his hometown as he was at some grand, state function.

Diefenbaker's death leaves "a great gap in the life of the country but he left a remarkable record of achievement that will stand for all time.

"He was a remarkable man. I'll miss him."

Boost cuts chiropractor visits

The provincial health ministry has increased chiropractic fees at the expense of patients.

And chiropractors are not happy with the government policy.

They confirmed today the fee for treatments has been boosted but the total allowance for patient visits under the B.C. Medical Plan remains the same.

The fee per visit has gone up from $7.20 to $7.75 but the $75 a year allowance to patients under 65 has not increased.

This means that instead of receiving 10 treatments a year, these patients will get only about eight.

The allowance for patients over 65 stays at $100 and they will receive about 10 treatements a year instead of 12.

"It doesn't cost the government a cent," said Charles Kibble of Vancouver, a director of the B.C. Chiropractors Association.

"The trouble is as the fee is increased year after year, it reduces the number of free visits. This is the way this governnment operates."

He said the asociation is still negotiating with the B.C. Medical Association and the health ministry.

One patient, Fellows Hewett of Victoria, said the free treatments are keeping people from taking up hospital beds.

"When you think it cost about $150 a day to keep a person in hospital, the free treatments are worthwhile," he said.

Fellows said the reduced treatments will also work hardships on pensioners and people on fixed incomes.

Chiropractor Bruce Russell agreed treatments keep people out of hospital.

"Our medical plan needs an overhauling," he said.

Chiropractor R.G. Boak said chiropractors were informed of the fee increase a few days ago.

"I haven't yet worked out all the implications," he said.

"For example new patient under 65 will get even less treatments as there is a fee for consultation and this comes out of the allowance."

Multi-year contract for Hanlon

VANCOUVER (CP) — Goaltender Glen Hanlon, out of action for almost three months last season because of a knee injury, has signed a multi-year contract with Vancouver Canucks.

Hanlon, 22, appeared in 31 National Hockey League games in 1978-79 before suffering torn knee ligaments Jan. 27 at Denver in a game against Colorado Rockies. He missed the rest of the season, but didn't undergo surgery.

The 22-year-old native of Brandon had a goals-against average of 3.10 with three shutouts before his injury, suffered when a Colorado player fell on his outstretched leg.

Whitecaps triumph 3-2 on goal by Lewington

Times News Services

Vancouver Whitecaps shrugged off hot weather in Dallas Wednesday to defeat Dallas Tornado 3-2 in a first-round playoff game for the North American Soccer League championship.

Dallas has a second chance when it meets the Whitecaps in Vancouver's Empire Stadium Saturday.

If the Tornado wins that game, a 30-minute, mini-game will follow to decide the series winner.

Buzz Parsons opened the scoring for Vancouver at 16:38 off a corner kick by Alan Ball and an assist from Willie Johnston. At 36:03, Kevin Hector scored again for the Whitecaps with assists from Bob Bolitho and Ball.

Dallas got back in the game when Zeqinha scored off a penalty kick at 40:55, his fifth goal on five penalties this year after Bob Lenarduzzi had been called for tripping Dallas forward El Indio Gomez.

The second Dallas goal followed at 59:44 on a shot by Kevin Kewley, who had just entered the game as a sub for George Ley.

Ray Lewington scored the winner in the 65th minute after a quick running exchange with Hector.

Fred Hoster, the Tornado general manager the last two seasons, announced his resignation prior to the game.

Tampa Bay is one of the NASL's most explosive offensive teams, but forward Steven Wegerle says the Rowdies may earn a berth in Soccer Bowl '79 on the strength of their defence.

The Rowdies' defence, led by Nanny Andruszewski, shut down Detroit's vaunted Trevor Francis and Wegerle's goal with 20:52 left gave Tampa Bay a 1-0 victory.

"Our defence was really super," Wegerle said, "but, then, they have been most of the season."

Andruszewski, who was named the defensive player of the game Wednesday, shadowed Francis all night, holding the explosive English striker to just three shots on goal.

Wegerle said he felt confident the Rowdies will be able to hold off the Express in the return match between the two clubs Sunday in Tampa Stadium.

In other opening-round matches, Los Angeles Aztecs upset Washington Diplomats 3-1, Chicago Sting upset Fort Lauderdale Strikers 2-0 and Tulsa Roughnecks nipped Minnesota Kicks 2-1 in overtime.

Today, Toronto Blizzard plays defending champion New York Cosmos and San Diego Sockers face California Surf.

Thomas Sjoberg scored both goals to give Chicago its first playoff win in its five-year history. The victory was the Sting's third straight shutout.

Alan Woodward scored with 3:45 left in the second overtime to give Tulsa its win over Minnesota after scoring the tying goal at 63:17.

Forward Hubert Smeets scored twice as Los Angeles beat Washington.

Meanwhile, in Portland, Timbers' board of directors decided to keep the team operating in Portland while seeking investors who can provide capital to attract better players.

"The mood, surprisingly, was very good," general manager Kent Kramer said after a meeting of the five directors. "It was the opinion of everyone not to make any hasty decisions, to continue to operate and at the same time investigate the possibility of a sale or restructuring."

Oregon Soccer, Inc., which operates the Timbers, is owned by about 60 Portland area people.

Timbers attracted an average of 11,172 persons a game while compiling an 11-19 record this yearf and are expected to face an operating loss of about $500,000 this year.

Today's Markets

Toronto

The Toronto stock market rose sharply in active mid-afternoon trading today.

A trading halt continued from Wednesday in shares of Home Oil Ltd., Cygnus Corp. Ltd. and Consumers Gas Co., which controls the former two companies.

Consumers Gas said it might begin talks on a possible amalgamation of Home Oil and Cygnus Corp. Further news is expected.

Consumers Gas last traded at $23¼, Home Oil A at $66½, Home Oil B at $67, Cygnus Corp. A at $17 and Cygnus B at $17.

Trading in shares of Scurry-Rainbow Oil Ltd., which is majority owned by Home Oil, was also halted Wednesday but resumed at mid-morning Thursday. The company said it is not affected by the proposed merger talks. There were no sales by 2 p.m. of the stock, which last traded at $41.

Trading in shares of Canadian Realty Investment Units resumed shortly after the opening following a halt Wednesday. The units were unchanged at $8¼ by 2 p.m.

Vancouver

Prices were up in another session of heavy trading today on the Vancouver Stock Exchange with a volume of 3,118,880 shares in the first four hours.

In the industrials, British Columbia Resources Investment Corp. was unchanged at $6.20 on 92,100 shares and Canadian Javelin was unchanged at $1.30 on 5,100. Taro was unchanged at $3.35 on 3,200 and Cominco was unchanged at $45 3-4 on 2,000. Westcoast Petroleum was unchanged at $22 3-4 and Renn was up .03 at $1.20.

Redford Mines was up .17 at $2.07 on 187,500 shares on the resource and development board, while SNA was up .03 at .45 on 113,200. Rhodes was up .40 at $2.80 on 106,000 and Jet-Star was up .25 at $3.25 on 99,200. Consolidated Trans Columbia was down .01 1-2 at .30 and Pacific was down .05 at .23.

New York

Stock prices rose moderately in heavy trading today extending the market's broad rally in the previous session.

Analysts say heavy institutional buying is behind the surge in the market in recent sessions.

London

The London stock market rose sharply near the close of light trading today.

The Financial Times index was up 5.8 to 480.0.

Canadian shares eased.
